Reds Wipe Out Last of Nazis' 330,000 Men

LONDON, Feb. 2.—(AP)—The Red Army has smashed completely the flower of Adolf Hitler's Axis army, 330,000 troops at Stalingrad, killing more than 100,000, and capturing 91,000 of them, including a field marshal and 23 generals, in the last three weeks to mark a definite turning point in the war.

A special communique recorded here by the Soviet radio monitor told of the triumphant Russian victory which releases a flood of additional Red Army divisions for heavier blows. 250 miles to the west where the Soviets are pushing into the Ukraine toward Kharkov and surrounding Rostov on the Sea of Azov.

Aside from the huge territorial strides of the Russians, the destruction of Axis troops and equipment was regarded as even more important in the Allied fight to force Hitler to his knees.

Tremendous masses of enemy equipment have fallen into Russian hands in Germany's unsuccessful effort to fulfill Hitler's vow of last September that Stalingrad would be taken.

In all more than 2,500 officers were captured, the Russians said. Field Marshal Friedrich Paulus, commander of the Nazi 6th army, surrendered last Sunday to the Russians along with 15 Axis generals. Tonight's bulletin telling of the end of the historic battle announced that Colonel General Walther Heitz, commander of the 8th army corps; Lieutenant General Streicher, commander of the 11th army corps, and innumerable other officers had put down their arms.

The Germans already had acknowledged the end was near, and Nazi propagandists in their homeland were exhorting the people to total mobilization.

"Today troops on the Don front completely finished the liquidation of the German Fascist troops encircled in the area of Stalingrad," the communique said.

"Our troops broke the resistance of the enemy encircled to the north of Stalingrad and forced him to lay down his arms."

Great Booty Taken.
The bulletin said "trophies are still being counted in one of the biggest battles in the history of wars," but listed this booty: 430 cars, tractors and transports, 320 radio transmitters, three armored trains, 235 ammunition and arms dumps, and a large amount of other equipment.

The Moscow Radio said tonight that Marshal N. N. Voronov and Colonel General Konstantin Rokossovsky, the Red army leaders.

Hygiene Conference To Be Opened Today

By LAMAR Q. BALL.
Cold facts that worry doctors and officers of the United States armed services about the prevalence of syphilis in the southeast—particularly in Atlanta—will be discussed at an all-day meeting today attracting, among other notables, Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general of the United States Public Health Service.

The meeting will be known as the southeastern regional conference on social hygiene and the topic of the day will be "Social Hygiene in War and Peace." Main sessions will be held at the Biltmore hotel.

The public is invited—in fact, as one doctor termed it, "implored"—to attend.

Public health officials, educators and ministers will join the doctors and the Army and Navy officers in a search for the best means to combat the spread of the social diseases—and to try to rout the germs that have listed Atlanta at the top of the list of large—250,000 to 500,000—population—cities afflicted in the United States.

More than 16 persons out of every 100 in Atlanta are diseased, sponsors of the meeting pointed out yesterday. Although some Military bands will play. Margaret Mitchell will sell bonds. Workmen will add, piece by piece, to the miniature cruiser as sales are made.

The rally will continue for three hours, and thousands are expected to gather at Five Points from 11 a. m. to 2 p. m.

Miniature of Cruiser.
The miniature of the new cruiser will be launched with the equivalent of $15,000,000 worth of work done on it. I will grow in proportion to the sales, John L. Conner, chairman of the New Atlanta-Cruiser Committee, explained.

Among the bands which will play during the rally are the Fort Benning paratroopers, the naval band from Charleston and the Civil Air Patrol musicians.

As the total in the cruiser bond drive reached $14,203,000 reports of bond sales throughout the state continued to pour into Conner's office.

Emmett O. Cabaniss, of Moxey, Ga., reported his family has bought $5,150 worth of bonds.

"We wish to speed the building of the new Atlanta," he wrote. "My boys, Emmet, age 10; Dan, 8; and Henry, 6, have put their cotton-picking and Christmas money into bonds. Isabel, 12, has put her egg money and Christmas money into a bond. Both their mother and myself have sacrificed to do the same."

The American Women's Voluntary Services, whose members have been active on many fronts of the cruiser bond campaign, reported the sale of $487,000 worth of bonds during January, as against a total of $296,000 in December. AWVS is out to beat that record this month.

AWVS members are taking care of booths and providing special service by sending bonded women to sell bonds to business firms too far away for employees to get to banks. This is done on pay days. Mrs. Don Tatem is chairman of the AWVS war bonds committee.

Buyers of Bonds.
Among the purchases of bonds listed yesterday by Conner were: Life and Casualty Insurance Company, of Nashville, Tenn., $200,000; Butlers, Inc., $100,000; Georgia Home Insurance Company, of Columbus, Ga., $100,000; North British & Mercantile Insurance Company, $50,000; Hardware Mutual Casualty Company, $25,000; National Washington Insurance Company, of Chicago, $25,000; A. G. Rhodes & Son, Inc., $25,000; Whodens Circle, $25,000; Guaranty Life Insurance Company, of Savannah, $20,000; the Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention, $12,000; Acme Life Insurance Company, $10,000; Farmers' Mutual Insurance Company, of Lafayette, Ga., $6,000.

Campbell High school reported the sale of $873.50 in stamps and bonds, with the drive at the Fulton county school continuing.

Churchill Vows To Lift Greece From Bondage

LONDON, Feb. 2.—(AP)—Prime Minister Churchill's trip to Turkey, viewed with keen interest by the Russians, included a stopover at the Isle of Cyprus, where he announced his pledge of aid to the Turks' "defensive security" and promised eventual deliverance of Greece "from foul bondage and tyranny."

Russian interest was noted, in the fact that Moscow broadcast today the full text of the British communique on the Prime Minister's trip. It was sent over the air at dictation speed for the Soviet press and thus was made available for publication throughout Russia.

The ministry of information disclosed that Churchill had stopped at Cyprus to renew his promises of arms and assistance against the Axis. For audience he chose a people whose mixed nationalities and history typify in many ways the whole Balkan problem.

In a brief speech to the people who combine Greek and Turkish heritage with membership in the British Empire he significantly referred both to the security of Turkey, which has held fast to her alliance with Britain under severe German pressure, and to the future of the Greek member of the Anglo-Balkan bloc.

Arms Output in U.S.
Soars to New High

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—(AP)—American arms production rose 14 per cent in December, a record-shattering increase, WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson reported today. The gain in warplanes alone was 20 per cent, and the increase in tanks, artillery and other ground ordnance 25 per cent.

In telling of the 14 per cent increase over November production, Nelson said total December output was nearly five times as great as in the month before Pearl Harbor.

SAVED FROM THE JAPS—"Patsy Lee," thus named by U. S. troops on Guadalcanal, is shown in safe hands after the Japanese who had killed her mother and father had slashed her arms with bayonets and hit her over the head with a rifle butt before throwing her in a ditch to die. Rescued by Marines, she was placed in the custody of Navy Chaplain F. P. Gehring, who is shown turning her over to Pere Jean, head of a French mission.

For March, the first ration period, she will have 48 points for every member of the family to spend on rationed goods. She will have to budget herself on canned goods according to her family's likes and dislikes.

For instance, a medium can of peas may require 10 points while a can of spinach may cost five points, and so on. She will be able to buy any kind of canned goods she chooses, as long as she stays within the family's points budget—and also has the money to pay for the cans, as usual.

The eight days between February 21 and March 1 are the rationing period. For the first time since the start of the war, Nelson divulged an exact airplane production total, saying that 5,489 planes were delivered to the Army, Navy and this country's allies in December, a gain of 667 over the previous month.

(A WPB spokesman explained that the 20 per cent increase was based on dollar volume of warplane production rather than on numerical output.)

"The volume of planes, tanks, guns, ships and other campaign material which rolled off assembly lines in the United States factories was the greatest ever produced in one month," Nelson said.

Nelson cautioned, however, that the showing was "partly the result of a year-end drive to clear up odds and ends in many shops." Because of this effort, which stripped assembly lines of materials to some extent, January production was hurt in some areas, Nelson said.

Moreover, the WPB chief declared that "each increase in monthly production from now on will be harder to obtain." The 1943 objectives are set at approximately twice the volume of last year.

Sale To Stop For Six Days, U. S. Decrees

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—(AP)—Public sale of canned fruits and vegetables will stop throughout the nation at midnight February 20 and will resume on a tightly rationed basis March 1.

These official dates for starting the drastic innovation in grocery shopping were announced tonight by the Office of Price Administration. The order also applies to all frozen fruits and vegetables, dried fruits (but not dried vegetables), canned soups and canned baby foods.

Canned goods rationing has been on the way for several months because of the quantities needed by armed forces and lend-lease operations. Many stores have for weeks limited customers to one or two cans of this or that.

The new ration system will be even more complicated than the controversial rationing of gasoline, oil and other products.

Values To Vary.
Canned goods rationing will, in fact, involve a dual currency system. Starting March 1, every time the housewife goes to the store for canned goods, she will have to pay not only the usual money price, but also a value in coupon points.

For March, the first ration period, she will have 48 points for every member of the family to spend on rationed goods. She will have to budget herself on canned goods according to her family's likes and dislikes.

For instance, a medium can of peas may require 10 points while a can of spinach may cost five points, and so on. She will be able to buy any kind of canned goods she chooses, as long as she stays within the family's points budget—and also has the money to pay for the cans, as usual.

Losses Are Reported On Both Sides in Navy Communique

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—(AP)—The Japanese have launched another major effort to retake the southwestern Solomon Islands, the Navy announced tonight, and American forces have engaged them in what may be the greatest sea-air battle of the Pacific to date.

Both sides have suffered some losses, the communique said, but information regarding them was withheld.

The official statement described the battle as "a number of sea and air actions" and added that to reveal details at this time "would endanger the success of future operations in this area."

The fact the information about losses was considered sufficiently valuable to withhold was generally considered to be an indication that blows suffered by the American forces were probably greater than would be involved in damage to a few light units.

At the same time there were signs that very heavy blows have been dealt the Japanese. Tokyo, in making the first announcement last weekend that some sort of action was in progress in the Solomons area, claimed to have lost only 10 planes and to have sunk two American battleships and three cruisers and damaged another battleship and cruiser.

Losses Exaggerated.
When tonight's communique was issued at the Navy Department, a spokesman was asked whether he had anything to add. "Yes," he replied emphatically. "You may say that the Japanese claims of United States losses are grossly exaggerated and their own losses understated."

In similar situations in the past, it has been Tokyo's practice to boast of very heavy American losses when in fact the Japanese had lost the battle.

While stating that "increased activity on the part of the Japanese indicates a major effort to regain control of the entire Solomon area," the Navy did not identify any of the locations of the actions, either those completed or those in progress. The Tokyo claim had fixed the location of the particular action which it covered as the vicinity of Rennell island, about 100 miles south of Guadalcanal.

Two Main Objectives.
The Japanese thrust appeared to have two main objectives: (1) To land heavy reinforcements and supplies on Guadalcanal where their shattered forces, now numbering only about 3,000 men, are cornered in the northwestern hump of the island.

(2) To break American sea power in the entire southwest Pacific area.

Whether they have thus far succeeded in getting any troops or munitions ashore was questionable. A mid-afternoon communique, while making no reference to the current battle, said that an American destroyer had shelled a number of barges at enemy-held Cape Esperance. Those might have been used either in new landings or in coastal movements by the hard-pressed troops ashore.

American sea forces in the area were believed to be considerable, and the American hold on the island was described by Navy Secretary Knox only last week, after a visit to Guadalcanal as secure. Knox confidently predicted that the remnants of organized Japanese resistance would be wiped out in 30 days.

The Japanese apparently had

Allies To Arm
French Force
Of 250,000

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—(AP)—President Roosevelt made known today that the American and British governments are going to rush modern weapons to North Africa for a French force of 250,000 under General Henri Giraud.

The chief executive mentioned this decision in reviewing, at a press conference that lasted 46 minutes, his momentous meetings at Casablanca with Prime Minister Winston Churchill and at Natal with President Getulio Vargas, of Brazil.

For the most part, he spoke in generalities but his manner and speech, expressing buoyant confidence without a trace of weariness from his 16,950-mile trip, left no doubt he considered the conferences highly productive ones. He emphasized that:

(1) The Casablanca conference primarily was a military one, concerned with questions of where and how to strike the Axis, and produced a unanimous agreement among the Anglo-American leaders and their military advisers.

(2) Premier Stalin of Russia, and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek were kept fully informed and there have since been exchanges between Mr. Roosevelt and the Soviet leader. The President said those who had asked why Stalin and Chiang did not attend might have stopped to recall that Russia is not at war with Japan while China, owing to its geographical position, is not actively fighting Germany.

(3) French Co-operation. He believed the conference would lead to greater co-ordination of efforts and co-operation between Giraud and General Charles de Gaulle, the Fighting French leader.

(4) The highlights of the talks. With President Vargas were the agreement that Dakar and West Africa must never again become a threat against the Americas and Brazil's decision to increase greatly its antisubmarine activities.

As for West Africa, he said the elimination of any threat from that quarter was something to be worked out in the peace agreement after the war, that it might be accomplished in several ways and that nothing had been worked out.

Brazil would greatly increase its air activity in the antisubmarine war, he said. He remarked also that Brazil was building a great many destroyers and submarines and that questions of priorities on certain items received from the United States and going into the ships had figured in the conversations with Vargas.

F.D.R. Tells of Odd Antics To Guard Him

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—(AP)—President Roosevelt related with evident relish today an account of antics performed by secret service men in a jeep in order to distract attention from him in North Africa.

The secret service men, he explained to a press conference, were traveling just ahead of him when he motored from Casablanca to Rabat where he reviewed American troops.

Whenever someone was sighted by the roadside, a secret service officer would pretend to be on the point of falling from the jeep and another would be trying desperately to haul him back in. The idea was that the bystander would be so intrigued by this sight that he would not notice who was in the next car.

Another stunt his guardians pulled, Mr. Roosevelt said, was to point to the sky and yell, "Look! Look!" when they rode by a European on the road, also with the idea of turning attention from the President.

In more serious vein, the chief executive said he and Prime Minister Churchill were extremely well taken care of, so far as protection was concerned. A regi-

Deferments Tighten, Thousands Warned To Make Job Shifts

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—(AP)—The government today warned hundreds of thousands of American workers to expect no further draft deferments, regardless of their number of dependents—unless they find more essential jobs.

It told men in 29 occupations that, even though they have five or six children, they must find war-important jobs by spring or face induction. The "non-essential" occupations affected range from bartenders to gardeners and waiters.

And Uncle Sam informed 36 kinds of businesses—from curtain makers to tobacco vendors—that their physically fit male workers from 18 to 38 will soon be doing more vital work—or shouldering arms.

Just a Beginning.

This is "just a beginning," Manpower Commissioner Paul McNutt declared. The lists will be expanded later. McNutt indicated all dependency deferments would eventually be eliminated.

"By the end of this year 10 out of every 14 of the able-bodied men between 18 and 38 will be in the armed services," McNutt said. (There are about 22,544,000 men in this age group; many of these, of course, are "able-bodied.")

McNutt served notice, too, that the present 37-year age top on inductions may be increased at any time by executive order.

Selective service boards were instructed to start April reconsidering the status of the newly designated "non-deferrable." However, any of these workers who have registered with the U. S. Employment Service in an effort to get more war-important jobs will have until May 1 to find their new places.

3-A's To Disappear.

In effect, informed quarters said, the new order means the disappearance this year of the 3-A draft classification—that of men deferred from induction because of dependents. McNutt's 10-out-of-14 statement means, these sources said, that selective service also will have to enter this year the 3-B classification—that for men with dependents engaged in activities essential to the war or essential to support of the war.

Local selective service boards have been working under instructions to call no men with children until they received "further notice." Today's order, McNutt said, is that further notice.

The War Manpower Commission estimates 3,200,000 transfers from nonessential jobs must be made in 1943 to meet production needs. That is one reason for the order, it was explained. Another is that the government hopes to induce men from nonessential jobs so that it won't have to take too many inductees out of shipyards.

Question, Answer Explanation To U.S. 'Non-Deferrable' Order

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—(AP)—Here, in question and answer form, is an explanation of today's order providing that persons in certain lines of work shall not be deferred from the draft on dependency ground after April 1.

Q. Does the order affect any draft registrants outside the 36 lines of work or the 29 specific job-occupations listed as non-deferrable?

A. Only indirectly in the sense that it might postpone the induction by adding to the pool of 1-A men (those available for immediate induction). This pool will be increased by the addition of others who might be deferred because of their children if their work had not been made non-deferrable.

Q. Does it mean that men with children will no longer be classified as 3-A (deferred for dependency)?

A. Men with children will still be in 3-A, except for those engaged in non-deferrable work after April 1. Some officials, however, believe that induction of men already being reclassified from 3-A to 1-A and additions to be made to the list of non-deferrable jobs will mean disappearance of the 3-A classification during this year.

Q. Must they shift to war work? A. Technically, no, since men with children could be deferred if they got into any work outside the non-deferrable list, even if it were not on the list of 35 essential activities. But officials warned that war work is the only secure work, since more and more jobs will be classified in time as non-deferrable.

Q. Suppose a man with several children tries to transfer from non-deferrable to other work, but can't find a job by April 1?

A. If he has registered with the United States Employment Service for a job transfer he will be given a 30-day period of grace after April 1 to land a job. Extension of this grace period is possible in the discretion of his local draft board, only on these grounds: 1. Sickness of the registrant or someone in his immediate family; 2. Physical disqualifications; 3. "Reasonable circumstance" that would not permit the change of employment without undue hardship to the registrant or his dependents.

Q. How will employers stay in business if the only jobs they can offer are non-deferrable?

A. War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt's answer to that is "hire women, older men, or physically-handicapped persons."

Q. What is the purpose of the non-deferrable order?

A. Man-power officials say the purpose is two fold: To shift workers from nonessential to essential jobs because 3,200,000 must transfer to war work from other work in 1943; and to provide a bigger pool of 1-A men for the fighting forces from nonessential ranks so that it won't be necessary to take so many men out of war work.

Q. Will all men who remain in work on the non-deferrable list be inducted after April 1?

A. No. They will not be inducted if they are 38 or older, or if they are physically, mentally or morally below the standards of the armed forces. Other men are liable to the draft unless they shift to work outside the non-deferrable list.

Q. Must they shift to war work? A. Technically, no, since men with children could be deferred if they got into any work outside the non-deferrable list, even if it were not on the list of 35 essential activities. But officials warned that

Eighth Army Ready To Hit Axis Forces

Americans Retire After Completing Raid on Sened.

By LEWIS HAWKINS.

LONDON, Feb. 2.—(AP)—The first activity by advance elements of the British Eighth Army which crossed the border into Tunisia last week was reported tonight from Algiers, indicating that General Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's forces may be getting ready to strike at the German army of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel from the south.

The Algiers radio reported the British units were patrolling between Ben Gardane, an important Axis airport inside the Tunisian border from Tripolitania, and Matmata on the other side of the Mareth line, behind which some of Rommel's forces are believed to be fortified.

Earlier, a British communiqué in Cairo disclosed that artillery of the Eighth Army was blasting a path toward Tunisia from Zuara and that patrols were active there in the face of stubborn rear guard action by Rommel's troops.

At the same time, hard-hitting American units struck lightning blows from the west.

Amid these developments, it appeared likely that the Allied forces in North Africa soon would be placed under the unified command of Lieutenant General Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Job Is Tough One.

In spite of the latest action, however, estimates from Allied sources that the job of pushing the Axis forces out of Tunisia will be a tough one appeared to have been confirmed in clashes of the past few days which left the Germans controlling the heights overlooking the coastal plain.

An Allied announcement said United States combat teams, moving fast and fighting well, drove eastward out of Gafsa and southward from Sidi Bouzid. Effecting a liaison, they fought their way into Sened, 20 miles west of Maknassy, repelled counterattacks and withdrew after completion of their tactical mission.

The announcement set forth no official reasons for the retreat, but military observers here said it probably was because the enemy was simply in too strong force in southern Tunisia to risk continued occupation.

Meet Heavy Resistance.

Another American column to the north met even heavier resistance at Faid Pass and was turned back. While still further north the British repelled an Axis attempt to extend lines toward Robaa.

An overall picture of the results showed the Germans still holding key passes along the series of ridges stretching from Fichon to Maknassy, with the Allies in possession of a good estimate of the enemy's strength through the successful Sened raid and other clashes.

Observers saw scant hope of the Allies striking serious blows toward Rommel's flank as long as Colonel-General Jurgen Von Arnim's Axis forces hold the heights. But at the same time the weight of his forces apparently is not great enough at present, they said, to permit him to push through the passes for possible wheeling actions toward Gafsa in the south or Robaa in the north.

Air Forces Active.

Meanwhile, both Allied middle east air forces whittled steadily at the Luftwaffe strength, with the Twelfth United States Air Force destroying 12 planes and the RAF downing two. The Americans lost four planes.

American P-40's, supporting the attack on Sened, ripped a large formation of German Stukas to shreds, shooting down three and damaging seven.

The docks at Tunis were blasted yesterday by Flying Fortresses which hit at least two ships of a convoy entering the harbor.

In a later announcement, the Twelfth Air Force said American Bombers on the Tunisian front had hit 54 Axis ships since the American landings in Africa, November 8. Most of the losses were attributed to Flying Fortresses.

The tank seven ships and damaged 23. B-26's sank four ships and damaged 12, while B-25's sank two and damaged four.

An Allied spokesman said the thrust against Sened "was purely a raid, and we withdrew after accomplishing our purposes."

Stars Reflect Individual Pride

The homage we pay to our loved ones in the service takes on a personal, individualized note when we pay that tribute by wearing a Star of Honor—as so many thousands are doing throughout America.

In every state in the Union, men, women and children are wearing a Star of Honor for each and every one of their relatives and other men near and dear to them who are now serving in our country's armed forces.

Prompt Census Of Farm Labor Is Promised

Senators Fear Shortage Threatening Nation's Food Supply.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—(AP)—Expressing anxiety lest essential food production be threatened by a military drain on farm labor, members of a senate committee obtained assurance today of a prompt census of the nation's supply of agricultural manpower.

Secretary of Agriculture Wickard, testifying before an appropriations subcommittee, said the information will be sought at once from county agents and state agriculture departments.

The committee's fear of a serious shortage of farm help was not lightened as a member said, by Wickard's discussion of present and future food supplies.

"It was a very discouraging and unsatisfactory picture," asserted the senator, who declined to be quoted by name. "The chief difficulty is a lack of labor, especially experienced labor, to work the farms."

The meeting was closed to reporters.

Announcing Wickard's intention of starting a county-by-county survey of the farm labor supply, Chairman Bankhead, Democrat, Alabama, said the information will be analyzed to show agriculture's manpower situation in each section of the country. Bankhead has told the senate last week he believes the solution to the manpower problem is "to continue in position to serve ourselves and our Allies as an arsenal for the production of food and instruments of war."

Senator Thomas, Democrat, Oklahoma, said he had asked Wickard in a letter to explain how he intended to finance the secretary's recently announced plan of distributing $100,000,000

Treasury Opposes Plan To Skip 1942 Taxes Altogether

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—(AP)—A plan to take a total of perhaps 24 per cent (after deductions) from the pay envelopes of American income taxpayers was proposed today by the Treasury.

The aim, it was explained, is to put the country's vastly enlarged income tax system on a partial pay-as-you-go basis, but the Treasury registered its unrelenting opposition to the Ruml plan to skip 1942 taxes altogether. It suggested that some of the 1942 tax might be "deferred" and some "forgiven."

The 24 per cent would include the present 5 per cent victory tax. Nineteen per cent represents the income tax rates that are applicable to most of the 44,000,000 American taxpayers—those whose incomes after exemptions and credits do not exceed $2,000.

Weekly Incomes.

Randolph Paul, Treasury general counsel, suggested to the House Ways and Means Committee that the new 19 per cent "withholding" levy be applied to all weekly income in excess of $11 for a single person, $26 for a married person, and $8 for each dependent.

Under the Treasury plan, the withholding levy would start July 1, at the latest. On March 15, 1944, the taxpayer would file a return on his 1943 income as usual. If the amount he had already paid on 1943 taxes actually exceeded his tax liability for 1943, he would get a refund. If he still owed the government money, he would pay the balance due. The vast majority of taxpayers would find themselves about even with the Treasury, Paul said.

Although he opposed skipping all 1942 taxes on the ground that it would wipe out $10,000,000,000 of Treasury "assets," Paul indicated the Treasury would be willing to "forgive" some of the taxes—just how much was not stated.

Both Taxes.

To require that 1942 and 1943 taxes both be paid this year "undoubtedly would be too harsh for some taxpayers," Paul said, and then added:

"Accordingly, deferment of payment of taxes for the transition year to the extent necessary to relieve such hardships appears to be desirable. This is not to say that some discount, or even a certain amount of forgiveness, may not be found to be desirable for the same reason."

The proposed new 19 per cent withholding levy would affect a man making $40 a week this way: If married with no dependents he would get $26 exemption and would pay 19 per cent of the remaining $14, or $2.66.

Man's Exemption.

If married with one dependent, his exemption would be $34 and he would pay 19 per cent of $6, or $1.14.

If single, he would receive an $11 exemption, and would pay 19 per cent of $29, or $5.51.

A man making $60 a week would pay $6.46 if married and no dependents; $4.94 if married and one dependent, and $9.31 if single.

Married Man.

A married man without dependents making $1,000 a week would pay $185.06. However, in March, 1944, this man would find that only about one-third of his tax had been paid, since the rate on a $50,000 income is about 30 per cent.

Therefore he would have to pay the remaining two-thirds.

The ways and means committee again warned taxpayers today that enactment of a pay-as-you-go law would not remove the requirement that they file their 1942 returns and pay at least the first installment by March 15.

The Treasury has expressed anxiety lest talk of a pay-as-you-go plan lead to a breakdown in the present collection system.

John Sullivan, assistant Treasury secretary, advised the committee that the number of returns filed in January was less than one-half of those filed the same month last year, although the number of persons with taxable income has increased vastly.

The committee, by resolution, stressed that at event a pay-as-you-go law is enacted, "forgiving" all or part of 1942 taxes, persons in the "forgiven" class who have made payment on 1942 incomes will have the amount paid applied to their 1943 obligations.

Dr. Pittman Resigns Post In Louisiana

Newly Re-elected Head of Statesboro College To Return to State.

NATCHITOCHES, La., Feb. 2.—(AP)—Dr. Marvin S. Pittman, ousted in 1941 by the Georgia Board of Regents from Georgia Teachers' College at Statesboro, Ga., resigned yesterday as director of instruction at Louisiana State Normal to return to the teachers' college as president.

He headed the Statesboro institution from 1934 to 1941 and had been here for the past year.

Pittman, a Mississippi native, holds degrees from Millsaps, Columbia and the University of Oregon and has done special study in Cuba and Mexico.

A popular educational speaker, Dr. Pittman is author of several textbooks.

He was invited to return last week to the Georgia school by the new Georgia Board of Regents, reorganized under appointment by Governor Ellis Arnall. Former Governor Talmadge charged Pittman with advocating racial education, causing his removal.

Pittman denied the charges.

Shotgun Blast Wounds Banks Sheriff, Son

Officer Fired Upon as He Chases Car Near Baldwin.

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION.
COMMERCIA, Ga., Feb. 2.—Sheriff Farris Brewer, of Banks county, and his son, Berner, are in the Commerce hospital suffering from wounds received last night when they were fired upon when chasing an automobile that they said "apparently was heavily laden."

The sheriff is suffering from badly burned eyes, which are also cut by glass and the son received six slugs in his right face and neck.

According to Berner Brewer, he and his father were driving three miles east of Baldwin last night about 11:30 when they noticed a car apparently heavily laden. They gave chase down a country road and finally drew up beside the car, when a charge of gunshot crashed through the right-hand side of the Brewer car.

The State Highway Patrol office at Gainesville reported today they had placed a man in the Hall county jail who is being held for questioning in the shooting, but that no charge had been made against him.

ALL-OUT DEFENSE—President Frank Gross, of the state senate (center), and House Speaker Roy Harris congratulate Brigadier General Eric Fisher Wood, commanding general of internal security for the fourth district, after his address before a joint session yesterday. Wood predicted Germany would attack our shores.

Huns to Invade Georgia, Says General Wood

Internal Security Chief Pictures Danger of Attack.

Before the war is over, Georgians will come to grips with Germans on their native shores, Brigadier General Eric Fisher Wood, commanding general of internal security for District 4, told the state legislature yesterday.

"I personally make this prediction," the white-haired New Englander, and veteran of World War I said before a joint session of senate and house. "Before this all-out war is over German battle action will be seen here on our home front, along and behind the Atlantic seaboard—including your own historic state of Georgia."

Most of General Wood's speech, aimed to promote continued efficient liaison work between the Army and State Guard, was withheld from publication, but the main theme of his words was that "it can happen here," and that the prime objective of enemy Fifth Column activities was to preserve this psychology.

District officers of the State Guard attended the session and the general was escorted into the house chamber by Governor Arnall, Adjutant General Clark Howell and members of the house and senate military affairs committees.

The general gave what he termed "a soldier's estimate of the military situation" regarding legislation expediting mobilization of the home front.

Arnall To Ask U. S. Ouster of Sion Hawkins

Governor Wants Spot Filled by Soldier of Own Choosing.

Governor Arnall within a few days will ask General Lewis B. Hershey, director of selective service, to relieve Brigadier General Sion B. Hawkins as head of selective service in Georgia and replace him with "a soldier whom I shall recommend," the chief executive said yesterday.

"If I am to be held accountable for administration of the service in Georgia," the Governor said, "it is only proper and right that I have the privilege of appointing someone in whom I have implicit faith."

The Governor said he thought General Hawkins "a goo" man, but I prefer to name my own man, subject to General Hershey's approval.

Arnall did not say who he had in mind but indicated his choice would be a man well experienced in military and selective service matters.

No change is planned in personnel of local draft boards which the Governor said had "done a good job."

Globe Girdling Drydocks Win Approval of House

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—(AP)—A measure authorizing expenditure of $210,000,000 for construction of a globe-girdling network of floating drydocks was passed on voice vote by the house today despite protests that the Navy already had let contracts for the work without congressional approval.

Representative Vincent, Democrat, a member of the Naval committee, said that the Navy Department had gone ahead "without a line of authority from the congress."

Chairman Vinson, Democrat, Georgia, said, however, that the work was urgent, and that the Navy had let tentative contracts after receiving approval from the President to do so.

British Get Balanced Diet, Augustan Says After Survey

AUGUSTA, Ga., Feb. 2.—(AP)—Dr. V. P. Sydenstricker, faculty member of the University of Georgia Medical College here, has returned after a year's study of nutrition problems under rationing in England with word that the British are getting a well-balanced diet.

Dr. Sydenstricker was sent to England by the Rockefeller Foundation to co-operate with the British Ministry of Health in the nutrition survey. Special attention, he said, was given those groups about which the British ministry was most concerned—women, older school children and miners.

He declared the English rationing plan was found to be working satisfactorily, and added that the nation was doing a "remarkable" job of feeding its people well-balanced food.

He praised especially an extensive plan for furnishing midday meals to school students at a cost equivalent to 10 cents, and the emphasis placed on milk for students.

Rationing in the United States should never reach the extent found necessary in England, he held, because of the productive capacity of this country.

As to morale in England, he said "they don't use such a word. Morale is just taken for granted."

There continues some apprehension in England of invasion possibilities, he reported, with the average person expecting the war to continue several years.

Herbert Brown Is Awarded Flying Cross

Georgian Honored for Extraordinary Heroism on Guadalcanal.

Lieutenant Herbert Stanton Brown Jr., of Martin, Ga., was recently awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross by Captain J. D. Price, commandant of the Naval Air Station at Jacksonville, Fla., for "extraordinary heroism in the Guadalcanal-Tulagi action."

Brown, a Navy flying officer, sighted some 27 enemy bombers heavily escorted by Zero fighters while he was leading a fighting squadron division. He broke formation and led a four-plane attack through the opposition. Seriously injured and his plane jammed, the Georgian continued in the engagement, with the net result that at least five Jap bombers were shot down.

A graduate of Georgia Tech, Brown enlisted in Naval aviation in June, of 1938. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Brown, and his wife reside in Martin. He is 24 years old.

Furniture for Soldiers' Rooms at Gordon Sought

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION.
SPARTA, Ga., Feb. 2.—Local citizens are making an effort to get enough furniture and other items needed for furnishing a "day room" at Camp Gordon, near Augusta, and they hope to secure enough to outfit one also for the Negro soldiers. The Rev. A. B. Elizer, a veteran of World War I, is sponsoring this work, along with the Sparta Lions Club and other organizations of the city and Hancock county.

Some responses have already been received and it is hoped to complete the matter this week and send the contributions to the camp.

Woman's Unit Craves Denies Of Georgia Fund Soliciting Guard Urged During Election

Legislature To Get Bill for Creation of WAGS, Arnall Says.

A women's auxiliary branch of the Georgia State Guard known as the WAGS will be provided in a bill to be presented the legislature within a few days, Governor Arnall said yesterday.

Members of the Guard approved this at a meeting with the Governor yesterday as the Governor got about "setting up the Guard by law instead of by executive order so that it will have a legal unit taking the place of National Guardsmen called into federal service."

Creation of the WAGS is left up to the Governor under terms of the proposed bill. Its members would perform duties similar to those of the WAACS and WAVES.

Other provisions of the bill, already drafted, will "freeze into office" Guard officers of local units, but will permit the Governor to change district officers and those in staff headquarters.

Among those attending the conference were Colonel W. P. Welch, of Gainesville, commanding officer of the Guard since the resignation of Colonel Lindley W. Camp, of Atlanta, last month. Adjutant General Clark Howell also was present.

The Governor said he thought the Guard had "done an exceptionally good job and has made a fine record." At the conference he said a streamlined Guard, highly mobile, would prove more efficient than one numerically stronger.

Arnall Bridges State Job Offers

For the time being, state department heads must get Governor Arnall's written okay before making appointments in their offices.

The Governor yesterday made public an order issued last Friday which he said was only temporary and was not designed to upset department heads' privileges of patronage.

"I am simply trying to control economy," he said.

After adjournment of the legislature, Arnall said he would "take the bridge off." By this time, he said, he will have had time to make a better examination of personnel.

Alimony Payment Exemption Urged

The house ways and means committee yesterday recommended passage of a measure allowing exemption of alimony payments from state income tax.

Representative Fred Hand, of Pelham, author of the bill, explained the federal government already allowed the exemption.

Further Debate On Linder Bill Slated Today

Controversial Measure To Spend Second Day on House Floor.

Refreshed last night after an argument over the Tom Linder bill which consumed most of yesterday's session, the state house of representatives is expected to resume debate today over the first real controversial measure of the present legislature.

The bill would extend the term of Linder as commissioner of agriculture two years in line with Governor Arnall's desire that terms of state officials run concurrently with the Governor's. The bill has senate approval but several amendments were added by the house.

One added provision would allow the Governor to appoint a commissioner when Linder's term normally expires in 1944, and house leaders predicted Arnall would reappoint Linder.

Harris for Bill.
House Speaker Roy Harris, attacking the system of previous years under which he said put "one holdover politician in position to punish another," spoke emphatically for the bill and predicted Linder would get the appointment if the amendment covering appointment was adopted.

But another representative, Carroll county's Willis Smith, said he doubted if Arnall would sanction the present commissioner because Linder has been outspoken against some agricultural policies of the national administration which Arnall said he would support.

Other house members, one of them Representative Meyer Goldberg of Arnall's home county (Covington), said they were in sympathy with the administration they could not vote for the Linder bill.

Ex-Talmadge Supporter.
Linder, a former Talmadge supporter, left the Talmadge ranks a few weeks before the last primary along with other long-time followers of the man from Telfair county.

Although the senate approved a bill removing clemency powers from the prison and parole commission, a companion measure setting up a new pardon board went to conference when the senate failed to approve house amendments.

The house amendment provides the new three-man board with power to commute death sentences by a majority vote.

Testimony Changed.
One of these witnesses, Hoyt Seabolt, former ranger, came back today to change his testimony. In his previous appearance, he was recorded as saying that he was approached about campaign funds by Charles Barrett, north Georgia district ranger. Today he testified that he had not been approached by Barrett, but by Ed Wall, supervisor of rangers.

Another ranger, Luke Chester, testified that he had been approached by either Wall or Barrett—he could not remember which—but they visited him together—and that he later sent $5 to Cravey. Cravey said he remembered receiving the donation, but that he had given no orders for solicitation among the rangers.

Both Bartlett and Wall denied that they had solicited funds. Wall, called before the subcommittee today, said some of the rangers had approached him on the subject of making donations, and he always asked Cravey what to do if they wanted to contribute, and Cravey told him to take the money or have it sent.

Asked to Subscribe.
Chester testified that he had been asked to make subscriptions to Governor Talmadge's newspaper, the Statesman, and that he had donated $3, designating the persons to receive the three subscriptions.

Cravey's testimony as to campaign activities was brief. Chairman Frank McNall, of Chatham county, head of the House Game and Fish Committee's subcommittee, asked Cravey if he had ever issued orders for rangers or other employees to solicit funds and distribute campaign literature.

Cravey answered him with a flat "no." But added, "I think it is well to let you know that I wouldn't have gotten mad if any of them had wanted to contribute to Talmadge's campaign fund."

There subsequently were brief references to campaign funds, but for the most part, the remainder of the long session was devoted to a general discussion of wildlife management and conservation.

There is a bill before the legislature to reorganize the conservation department and vacate the office held by Cravey. If it passes, it will mark the second time he has been legislated from office—the E. D. Rivers' administration having put him out the same way.

At conclusion of the session, McNall said he did not know when the subcommittee would report to the full committee.

Legislators Invited.
Legislators now in Atlanta for the 1943 sessions of the General Assembly have been invited to the meetings, particularly. The all-day conference will wind up tonight with a meeting at 8 p. m. at which Dr. Parran will be the principal speaker. He will be introduced by General Bryden, Robert F. Maddox, chairman of the Georgia State Board of Health, will preside.

At a 12:30 p. m. luncheon today Hugh H. Clegg, assistant director of the FBI of Washington, will discuss "Not Laws Alone," in an effort to show that the public health must be safeguarded by a program of education. Clegg, an assistant to J. Edgar Hoover, will be introduced by Ralph McGill, editor of The Constitution.

Alan Johnstone, counsel of the Federal Works Agency, of Washington, will discuss "Laws and Law Enforcement." He will be introduced by Harilee Branch Jr., acting president and president-elect of the Atlanta Bar Association. Mayor Hartsfield will welcome the guests to the luncheon. Dr. Frank Boland, chairman of the board of directors of the Georgia Social Hygiene Council, will preside at this luncheon meeting.

In an afternoon discussion of industrial hygiene, Dr. Lester Rumble, president of the Atlanta

The Ration Counter...

Your questions about all phases of the various rationing programs will be answered authoritatively by the Ration Counter. Telephone your questions to Walnut 3876 between the hours of 10 a. m. and 6 p. m. Inquiries by mail must be accompanied by a self-addressed, stamped envelope. They should be addressed to the Ration Counter, care The Constitution, Atlanta.

The OPA in Washington late yesterday announced that the point rationing program will go into effect March 1, and that beginning February 21 sale of all foods on the ration list will be frozen for an eight-day period.

Regional OPA officials pointed out that this does not mean that grocery stores will close. It merely means that canned or bottled fruits and vegetables and their juices, canned soups, canned baby foods, dried fruits and frozen fruits and vegetables will not be sold during the last week of February.

Stores will remain open as usual and will continue to sell fresh fruits and vegetables, meat, milk, bread and all other foods except those specifically named in the new ration list. OPA pointed out that all the foods necessary for a balanced and varied diet will be available throughout the freeze period, although fresh fruits and vegetables will have to be substituted for canned varieties.

Registration for War Ration Book Two will begin on Monday, February 22, and will last six days rather than the 10-day period originally announced. Whether the alphabetical registration plan will be followed in the shortened registration period was not known in the regional OPA office last night, since instructions from Washington have not yet arrived.

Housewife's Unusual Question Is Answered by OPA

A letter from an Atlanta reader poses an interesting question regarding point rationing, one which probably is faced by a number of persons whose ordinary way of living has been upset by wartime conditions.

She writes: "My husband, two children and I moved to Atlanta from a small town a few months ago. On account of the terrible rents here, we have found it impossible to rent a suitable house that we could pay for, so have been boarding."

"The early part of 1942, housewives were advised to stock up on some canned goods essentials in case a shortage should arise. Since my husband's salary is not large, with two growing children, we found it difficult to finally accumulate approximately $50 worth of canned goods—about a six weeks' supply at the very most."

"My question is this: I have offered this food to my boarding housekeeper at the price I paid for it (which are very much lower than the current market price) but she cannot use them because she buys in large quantities and uses different brands. I cannot blame her when she tells me that she cannot let us stay at her house unless we turn our ration cards over to her, but if points are deducted for all that I have accumulated, there will be no value to our ration books. What are we to do? I have no desire to circumvent rationing laws, nor do I feel that I have been guilty of hoarding, since we were advised to take this step, and if I had been able to find a place to keep house, I would have used up my stock."

"Obviously, we have to eat, and without ration books we cannot board. And we cannot find a place to live."

Would Still Retain Half Of Ration Point Coupons

According to OPA regulations, this woman would be required to make a declaration of all the goods she has on hand. However, none but 8-point stamps will be removed from her ration books, thus leaving half the point value intact for her use as she sees fit.

Just why the landlady feels that she can't use the stocks her boarder has on hand is not clear. As time goes on, it is probable that everyone will have to make substitutions because many packers are selling almost their entire output directly to the government.

Secretary Wickard has pointed out that approximately 40 pounds of canned fruits, vegetables and soups will be available for each civilian during 1943. Since the contents of the average No. 2 can weighs slightly more than a pound, this means between 35 and 40 cans per year—less than one a week per person.

It would appear that the landlady will need these stocks before very long.

If she plans to buy them, she must do so before point rationing becomes effective, for after that date, she would not be permitted to purchase any canned goods without giving ration stamps for them.

Limit on Milk Package Applies to Chocolate Milk

A groceryman at 1750 DeFoor avenue, N. W., yesterday called to know if restrictions on sale of milk in less than quarts applies to chocolate milk as well. Under the regulations, chocolate milk or other similar packaged fluid milk products come under the same rules as plain milk. Chocolate milk may be sold in smaller containers for consumption on the premises, but if it is to be taken away from the store it must be in a container holding at least a quart.

O. L. Adams, of 226 Glenwood avenue, has a place a short distance from Atlanta, which is eight miles from the nearest public transportation facilities. He wants to know if he may use his car to go down and make repairs to the place and also to do some work on three or four dams on the property. He says, "I have word from there that the last rains have washed out some of the dams and they must be repaired at once or the water will ruin the rest of the property and drain the lakes."

The OPA ruling is that he may use his car, since this is an "emergency involving a threat to property."

Mrs. J. C. Ritchie, of 250 Third avenue, wants to know if she can use her car to plant a garden on her five vacant lots at Pine Lake. She has a small plot of ground at home and is planning to cultivate that, but wants to put in potatoes and corn and other crops which require a large amount of space.

Garden Will Have To Wait Until a Later Date

Regional OPA officials have ruled in the negative to her question. "For the present time," an official said, "we must consider this non-essential driving. Those are our instructions from Washington. A little later, when the weather in the north warms up and tank cars can again be used to haul gasoline, the driving ban is expected to be lifted. At that time, Mrs. Ritchie probably will be allowed to plant her garden."

Small retailers of sugar and coffee whose sales volume did not total $5,000 in December, 1942, need not open rationing banking accounts, OPA announced yesterday.

Large retailers and all wholesalers are required to open these accounts, and small dealers may do so if they like. But if they prefer, they may turn their ration stamps over to their suppliers who will of course deposit them in ration bank accounts.

Canned Foods Freeze Feb. 21

February 20 and March 1 will be used for two purposes. Grocers will stock their stores, mark point values, on either cans or counters, train employees in the rationing method, and make other preparations.

The public will use the period to line up at schools, churches and other public places to get new ration books. This registration, to be handled by 1,500,000 volunteer clerks, will begin February 20 and run for six days.

Sometime during those eight days, also, OPA will announce what the point values of different cans, frozen packages, or dried fruit packages will be worth during March (values may change from month to month). To announce these values beforehand, officials said, might tempt the public to hoard those types of foods which will cost the most points.

Point Value to Change.
Point values will vary according to the sizes of cans or packages, and also according to the relative scarcity of the particular types of fruits or vegetables. These variations will be somewhat similar to the variations in money prices.

Large cans will cost more points than small cans. Peas and corn will cost more points than tomatoes. The first duty of housekeepers will be to take an inventory of their pantries Sunday morning, February 21. OPA suggested housekeepers lay out on a table all the foods which will be on the March 1 ration list. From this layout they should take away without counting any cans containing less than eight ounces—these are mostly small size baby foods. Then they should give away five cans for every person in the family, regardless of age. The number of cans or packages left over is the number which will have to be reported when some representative of the family goes to get the family's new ration books.

This pantry count will pay no

Rickenbacker Scores Labors' Absenteeism

Airline Executive Would Give Workers Taste of Foxholes.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 2.—(AP)—Captain Eddie Rickenbacker declared today that "the perpetual slow-down in war industry caused by absenteeism—particularly in the aircraft industry where it exceeds the average of 10 per cent—is probably the most flagrant abuse" of Americans' obligations since Pearl Harbor.

The air-line executive and flyer, in an address prepared for delivery at the Advertising Club, advocated, if necessary to make Americans appreciate their obligations, that troops be returned "from the hell-holes of the world" and placed in factories, and war workers be sent out to the fronts of the war.

"Take the war workers and place them in the foxholes with the trench, vermin, diarrhea, malaria and the Japanese, and I will guarantee you that our production will be increased, and much of it doubled—within 30 days," he asserted. "We would have no more feather bedding—no more slow-downs—no more restrictions on effort."

Rickenbacker called upon congress to provide legislation now which would assure returning service men equal employment rights without the necessity of joining any organized labor unions.

Not a Labor Hater.

"No, I am not a labor hater," he declared. "I believe in honest labor unions who are doing their damndest to turn out the weapons we need. I have been laboring for 40 odd years—since I was 12 years of age—in many lines of endeavor. I come from humble parents. I know the value of honest labor. I have served labor as well as employer."

Turning to the absentee problem, Rickenbacker said that in the Boeing factory alone 26 per cent of the employees were absent the day after Christmas, and in the Douglas plant 11,000 failed to report for work on the same day.

"There is no absenteeism in the fox-holes of the jungles of the Pacific or the burning sands of Africa," he said. "For if attempted there, they would get a bayonet in their bellies from their fellow Americans."

Has Three-Point Program.

Referring again to his war worker proposal, the flyer said: "... If there is any question about the capabilities or the sincerity of our war workers, bring back groups of 20 or 30 of these men from these hell-holes at $50 per month, place them in the factories in uniform with the rest of us and you will soon find out whether you are doing your maximum or not."

Rickenbacker suggested that congress adopt a three-point program for members of the Armed Forces, providing that:

"Upon his release or discharge any member of our Armed Forces can be employed by any employer without having to join any organized labor unions."

"Second—upon his employment, he shall have equal voting rights with any other employee in any union, and any employer and management plan of the employer."

"Third, his seniority in relation to other employees of draft age should date as of the day he enlisted or was inducted into his country's service."

sent a message to Premier Joseph Stalin at 8:30 p. m., saying: "Carrying out your order, troops on the Don front at 4 p. m., February 2, finished the rout and annihilation of encircled enemy troops at Stalingrad."

Then Joseph Stalin issued an order of the day to Voronezh and Rokossovsky and their troops congratulating them "for their excellent military activities."

Germans Give Up.

Dispatches from Moscow said captive lines of Nazi and Rumanian troops filled the broken, blasted streets of Stalingrad today asking "Where is the place you surrender?"

The city named for Stalin already was trying to make the skeleton ruins of the town livable again. Sappers were clearing the streets of mines imbedded in broken pavements and sidewalks as the Axis prisoners, dirty, ragged, hungry and half-frozen, awaited transfer to concentration camps.

The siege of Stalingrad began last August 25. It was the high-water mark of the 1942 offensive that rolled eastward from the Kursk-Kharkov-Tamansk line, and veered southeastward to the Volga and the Caucasian foothills.

Tonight Soviet troops not only had broken the last resistance at Stalingrad, but were advancing far to the west over ground where they had themselves retreated in the early days of last summer's Nazi push.

German "Road of Death."

Hitler was determined to strangle Stalingrad not only because of its symbolic importance to the Russians, but because he wanted to cut the Volga river communication artery linking central Russia with the oil of the Caucasus.

It became a German "road of death." When the siege began August 25 the Red Army had turned every building into a miniature fortress. The Germans almost took the city once, but Russian reinforcements slipped across the Volga river at night and nailed the German threat.

Both sides undoubtedly suffered heavily in the long bitter battle of attrition. Stalin said once that the first 60 days of siege cost the Germans 100,000 men, 1,000 planes and 8,000 tanks.

The Germans had become very confident that Stalingrad's end was near when they first fought their way into its outskirts. Nazi spokesmen kept saying it was only a matter of days. On September 30 Hitler declared the city would be conquered and said "You may rest assured that no human being will be able to oust us from there."

Russians Spring Trap.

Russia's powerful counterblow was struck November 19. Red Army wings on both sides of the city crossed the Volga and hammered out a junction on the Don river 25 miles west of Stalingrad. Reinforcements flooded into the

Peggy' Loses Pin, But Helps Cruiser

Margaret (Peggy) Mitchell

Marsh is minus a pretty corsage and an extraordinary corsage pin for which she once combed New York, but the new Atlanta cruiser campaign is $16,000 closer to the $35,750,000 it will take to replace the sunken warship as a result of her activities yesterday in Fannin county.

Not that the corsage and pin brought $16,000, but when they were auctioned off, they swelled the day's activities by exactly $5,000.

Peggy went to Blue Ridge, in Fannin county, for a bond rally at the request of B. J. Cantrell, father of Paul Cantrell, who was aboard the cruiser Atlanta. Cantrell is chairman of the bond drive captured terrain to seal the fate of the 330,000 trapped Germans.

At first it was believed the Russians had only that single objective. While the Germans outside the ring and inside were trying to break the Russian circle, other Red Army offensives unfolded—in the Caucasus to the south, in the middle Don and Voronezh fronts to the northwest.

With all German relief efforts smashed, the Nazis were reduced to supplying their Stalingrad forces by transport plane. Hundreds of these were shot down, and as the circle contracted there no longer were any airfields available to the Germans.

Refuse to Surrender.

The last Russian push at Stalingrad began January 10 when the Germans refused to surrender. German high command communications became more and more reticent at first, then began acknowledging the danger to General Paulus' troops. Soon Berlin pictured the men as martyrs who, while fighting "only with rifle bullets and bayonets," were preventing the Russians from expanding successes elsewhere.

Berlin announced the elevation of General Paulus to field marshal last Sunday just before the Red Army announced his capture—a final gesture to the doomed leader.

Colonel General Walter Heitz, of the Second German Army Corps, also was promoted to that rank Sunday. He was listed tonight as an additional Russian prisoner.

The erasure of the final Nazi at Stalingrad came three days after Berlin's gloomy celebration of the tenth anniversary of Hitler's rise to power. Hitler himself was notable by his failure to make a speech on the anniversary last Saturday when British bombers called twice to disrupt the program carried out by his party leaders.

Generals Made Prisoner.

Final German resistance apparently was not yet determined at Stalingrad tonight. Soviet communiqué saying 45,000 Axis troops surrendered in the past two days. That was about all there were left.

Among a galaxy of German officers captured the Russian bulletin included these:

Lieutenant General Von Rodenburg, commander of 76th Infantry division.

Lieutenant General Von Zisk, 113th Infantry division commander.

Lieutenant General Von Lenski, 24th Tank division commander.

Major General Martin Latmann, 369th Infantry division commander.

Major General Raske, commander of a group of German troops that had been encircled in the central sectors of Stalingrad and west of the city.

Other prisoners listed tonight included these:

A Major General Magnus; Colonel Adam, personal adjutant of Field Marshal Paulus; Colonel Ludwig, commander of the 14th Tank division; Colonel Franz Nebelker, commander of the 227th Infantry regiment of the 100th division; Colonel Frederick Neir, commander of the Second Motor regiment; Colonel Guenther Krag, commander of the 29th Artillery regiment of the 29th Motor division; Colonel Snitzer, chief of staff of the Eighth Army Corps; Colonel Maltopol, chief of artillery of the First Rumanian cavalry division; Colonel Schilling, commander of the 13th Sapper regiment of the Eighth Army Corps.

times in the past, he also assured the Cypriots that the United Nations were strong not only in arms and men but in "unity of purpose" and "comradeship" as well.

His visit to Cyprus, which after the fall of Crete in May, 1941, became the last island barrier in the eastern Mediterranean to Hitler's expansion, also was regarded here as a mark of recognition of the strategic importance of the island and its "powerful forces" in the military sphere which was surveyed during the talks at Adana, Turkey.

Cyprus History.

Cyprus, lying near the Italian Dodecanese group and German-occupied Crete on one potential route of Allied attack against the Axis "underbelly," has a population of 360,000, mainly Greeks and Phoenicians, Egyptians, Romans, Byzantine emperors, Arabs, Venetians and Turks until the British took over the administration by treaty in 1878 and finally annexed it when they went to war against Turkey in 1914.

After the arrival in Cairo from Cyprus nothing has been disclosed about Churchill's whereabouts.

In Cyprus, Churchill addressed a gathering of leading personalities and inspected the garrison.

Sees President.

"I have had a most agreeable meeting with President Inonu and with the chiefs of the Turkish state and I am glad to tell you our relations with the Turks are the most friendly character," he said.

"Their views are very much like our own and we intend to help their own general defensive security in every way in our power."

Observers here saw in the unprecedented visit of a belligerent chief to a neutral the closing of one, more gap in the armored ring tightened around German Europe, and the implied preparations for the final assault on the Axis.

Considering the United Nations strategy as a whole, these additional conclusions may be drawn:

1. Turkey, because of her diplomatic and geographic position, symbolizes the key to the whole question of her Anglo-American-Russian collaboration and Russia is just as much concerned with the Adana conference as the United States and Britain.

2. Turkey has been disabused of any belief in a German victory to the extent that she feels safe in welcoming one of the big four United Nations leadership on her soil, and thus becomes the first of the remaining neutrals in this part of the world to take sides in any degree with the Allies.

3. Turkey has taken sides to the extent of concluding at least a defensive arrangement with the United Nations.

City May Get First Atlanta Cruiser's Flag

Found in Annapolis Museum, Ramspeck Requests Its Use.

For the first time since a Yankee captain claimed it as a prize of war, the Confederate flag which flew from the mast of the first cruiser Atlanta may be coming home!

Congressman Robert Ramspeck, on information supplied by an Emory librarian interested in Confederate lore, tracked the flag down to the Naval Academy Museum at Annapolis and has asked permission to have it sent back to Atlanta for display during a campaign to raise funds for the new Atlanta.

"Mr. Ramspeck sent me a letter from the assistant curator of the museum in which he said the flag was there and he would ask the curator to loan it to Georgia for the sale," Dick Harwell, Emory library worker, said yesterday afternoon.

The flag, Harwell said, was a brand-new naval ensign at the time the Atlanta was sunk, being displayed in battle for the first time after its adoption as the Confederate flag. He described it as being 12 feet six inches long and five feet, 10 inches wide with 13 white stars on a red field marked with diagonal blue stripes.

The captain of the Weehawken captured the Atlanta June 17, 1863, in the mouth of the Wilmington river in Georgia while the Confederate ship was steaming with its then formidable armor to tackle the naval blockade through southern ports.

Commander Will A. Webb, captain of the Atlanta, had obtained permission from Richmond to display the new flag before it was to make its official appearance July 1, 1863, and after he lost it in battle it disappeared from the Confederacy. From records at Emory the searching student found that Admiral S. F. Dupont, in command of the South Atlantic blockade, had sent the flag and highway to the Navy Department in Washington.

Allot $89,428 To Road Jobs In Cobb County

Money Is Drawn From Emergency Fund, Arnall Says.

The state has set aside $89,428 from its emergency fund as its share of the cost of a Cobb county highway project since the new appropriation law prohibits the anticipation of revenue for road construction.

Under the new law, Governor Arnall said yesterday, "the state can't build a foot of road unless the money is put aside before a contract is entered into and is kept inviolate."

The state in the past has made a practice of letting highway contracts in anticipation of revenue that would be received before the contract became payable. Now the highway department has to have the money in hand for a project before it can let a contract.

Although the six-month appropriation bill enacted by the legislature provided only $50,000 for new highway construction until June 30, budget authorities were granted authority to make additional allotments for emergency work.

Arnall said he had acted under this section in drawing $89,428 from the emergency fund for the Cobb county project, since it involves construction of access roads to the Bell bomber plant near Marietta. The total cost of the work is $379,637, the balance being financed by the federal government.

B. H. Middlebrooks Dies at Home Here

B. H. Middlebrooks, formerly of Yatesville, Ga., died late Monday at his home, 1003 Gordon street, S. W. He had been a resident of West End for 20 years, having moved to Atlanta from Upson county in 1922.

Before he retired four years ago, Mr. Middlebrooks was connected with the Guarantee Mutual Life Insurance Company. Prior to that he was a salesman and traveled throughout the state.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ethel Middlebrooks; three sons, B. H. Middlebrooks Jr., storekeeper, second class, in the Navy; W. B. Middlebrooks, of Sharon, Ga., and Columbus, Miss., and T. A. Middlebrooks, of Washington, D. C., and a daughter, Mrs. Garnett Q. Russell, of Atlanta.

Funeral arrangements will be announced by H. M. Patterson & Son.

O. P. Morris, 38, Succumbs Here

Orace Paul Morris, 38, formerly with the Automatic Coalburning Corporation, died yesterday afternoon at his residence, 1092 Boulevard drive, N. E.

Survivors include his wife; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Morris, and a sister, Mrs. S. L. Chambers, all of Atlanta.

Funeral plans will be announced later by H. M. Patterson & Son.

FIGHTING GREEK BUYS BONDS—Coty Cotsakis, 4, son of George Cotsakis, president of the Atlanta chapter of the Ahepa, donned his Ezzone, the costume of the fighting Greek, last night to purchase $100 worth of war bonds from George Vournos, supreme commander of the Ahepa, who met with local Greeks yesterday.

Atlanta Greeks Optimistic at Ahepa Dinner

Leader George Vournos, On Bond-Storming Tour, Visits Here.

Optimism was expressed last night by members of the Atlanta chapter of the Ahepas, who met with George Vournos, supreme commander of the order, now completing a nationwide tour in the interest of the war bond campaign in which the Greeks of America have set their goal at $50,000,000.

The Atlanta Greeks entertained a dinner given last night at the Biltmore hotel.

An elaborate program was arranged by Nick Chotas, chairman of the war bond drive here.

The Fort McPherson Reception Center band rendered several patriotic numbers, while Greek girls, attired in costumes of their native country, sang a number of Greek songs, including the national anthem of their homeland, then closed their part of the program by rendering "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Man Allen, state war savings administrator; John L. Comer, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce Cruiser Campaign Committee; Mayor Hartsfield and Chief Justice Charles E. Reid were guests at the dinner.

Vournos told the Atlantans that the drive is gaining momentum in all parts of the United States, but that it will require unselfish work on the part of every man, woman and child in the United States to bring about the great financing program. He urged the Atlanta Greeks to buy all the bonds they could afford, then make sacrifices and buy still more bonds.

Red Cross Sends Food To People of Libya

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—(AP)—Three truckloads of food for Italian civilians and the Arabian population in Tripolitania, Libya, have been sent from Cairo, the American Red Cross announced today.

The 15,000 pounds of dried milk, rolled oats and chocolate would provide an estimated three weeks' feeding for Italian mothers, children, invalids and civilian casualties as well as for the Arabians in the area, the Red Cross said. It added that the supplies were sent in response "to an emergency request of the British authorities."

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backaches quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about a pint a day. When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to reach the brain, it may cause nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up at night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or steady passage with aching and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait. Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Turkey

While war necessity once again bars from immediate public knowledge full details of the conversations held between Prime Minister Winston Churchill of Britain and President Ismet Inonu, of Turkey, there are several clear inferences which must be evident to all.

In the first place the mere fact it is our side which is now conferring with officially neutral countries, in stead of Hitler and the Axis, is ample evidence that the offensive in the global war has at last swung over to the United Nations. Not so long ago it was Hitler who was doing all the conferring. Now it is our turn.

And it does not appear possible that, whatever the outcome of the meeting at Adana, Hitler can do much of anything about it.

Secondly, the fact that Turkey is willing to discuss war problems with a high representative of the United Nations is strong corroborative evidence that the world is realizing victory, in the end, will inevitably perch upon our banners. Turkey has carefully held a precarious position on the fence, ready to join the winning side in the conflict whenever she is sure which side that will be. It must be that now she realizes the Axis cause is hopeless.

Thirdly, the conference resulted in plans under which Great Britain and the United States would "help Turkey materially to consolidate her own general security." Which means, in simple language, send more arms and army equipment to the Turks.

Does anyone believe the United States and the British governments would send arms, needed in other arenas of combat, to a country unless they knew that country was prepared to use those arms in the cause of the United Nations?

As to what contributions Turkey can make, on the military and strategic sides, to the Allied cause, they are not small. Her army, while doubtless in need of modern equipment, is one of the toughest and hardest fighting forces in the world.

Turkey may act as guard to the Allied right flank in any campaign planned for the entire Mediterranean area.

Turkey, by permitting our troops to use her soil, could provide a land base for an invasion force driving up through the Balkans to stab the lightly defended heart of southeastern Germany.

Turkey could be of tremendous aid by opening the Dardanelles as a channel for the transport of supplies to Russia.

Whether Turkey eventually fights with us or not, she is in position to furnish invaluable assistance. The Adana conference indicates that assistance will be forthcoming when the proper time arrives.

Tokyo Goes Fishing

Tokyo answers the Casablanca conference by announcing the alleged sinking of two U. S. battleships and three U. S. cruisers in the southern Solomons, not far from Guadalcanal. There has been no confirmation of the claim from any other source.

Of course, the report could be true. All things are possible in war. But it is extremely unlikely.

The announcement is, in all probability, a "fishing" expedition. This would mean that Tokyo is worried about the whereabouts of our naval forces in the South Pacific; that her own channels of information have been unable to locate these ships.

So, Tokyo puts out the announcement of their sinking in the hope we shall promptly deny the claim and offer proof of its falsity by revealing where the ships are. That is a not uncommon trick in warfare.

If the ships have, actually, been sunk it is a severe blow. And we shall be told in due time by our own Navy Department, when the admission will no longer be of value to the enemy as information.

But the far greater probability is that Tokyo is merely "fishing" for information which it is unable to secure by any other means.

Dies' Charges

Congressman Martin Dies has once again launched an attack on federal employees at Washington who, he charges, hold Communist affiliations. He designated approximately 40 employees by name, on the floor of the house, and urged that congress force a purge by withholding funds from the government agencies employing them.

Before attempting the Dies charges at face value it would be well to remember that this is the time of year when the Texas congressman asks for additional appropriations to continue the special committee, of which he is chairman, in existence. For years now about the only activity of Dies has been the alleged investigation of Communist and subversive activities in this nation. He has, year after year, secured substantial appropriations for what is known as the "Dies Committee," and, according to charges made by other members of the committee, has practically directed its work personally, without consideration or consultation with the committee personnel.

Dies has made charges similar to those he aired in the house on Monday, many times before. They seem to be timed, each year, shortly before the committee appropriation comes up for consideration.

There are agencies of the government whose sole duty is to combat enemy agents and subversive influences. There is the Federal Bureau of Investigation which has done a job literally magnificent in effectiveness. There are other investigative agencies.

It would seem the part of wisdom to leave this work to the trained operatives of the F. B. I. and others like them. Elimination of the Dies Committee would, in all probability, have little if any effect on the control of enemy agents among us and it would, at least, save to the taxpayers the money which has been annually expended for its maintenance.

In the words of Representative Will Rogers, of California, the Dies activities smack too much of "personal publicity."

The picture of a West Point wedding gives us the happy pair surrounded by the customary drawn swords. Under the circumstances, the groom wisely put up no resistance.

Teapot Tempest Ends

By withdrawing the name of Edward J. Flynn, as his nominee for the post of minister to Australia, President Roosevelt has ended a senate squabble which reflected little credit upon that august legislative body. Flynn requested the withdrawal after it became apparent that the senate would vote against his confirmation.

The attack on Flynn was purely political in origin. Charges against him were so picky as to be absurd. But, realizing their newly gained strength in congress, the Republicans made his nomination the vehicle for an attack really aimed at the President. They were able to win to their side sufficient Democratic senators to assure defeat of the Flynn nomination. So, to save his friend, the President, from embarrassment, Flynn requested the withdrawal of his name.

It is the first time a diplomatic nomination by President Roosevelt has been successfully opposed. It is the first rebuff for the administration by the new congress. It is a demonstration of the new independence of the congress, but it is unfortunate that it should have been so groundless an attack, so unworthy a cause. It is the senate itself that has "lost face," in the whole thing, and not the President or his administration.

Georgia Editors Say:

MUST SOON BREAK THE NEWS.

(From the Moultrie Observer.)

The leaders in Germany now realize that they must soon break the bad news to the people back home. German leaders have known for some weeks that things were going badly with their army, but they have very strict censorship in Germany that even denies the German citizens the right, not only to publish the news in newspapers, but listen to news from radios in foreign countries. They have done a good job of fooling the home people. The censorship works pretty well when things are going good.

There comes a time, however, when truth will out. It must be told. Germany is close to the point where there must be some admissions made to the home people. Those admissions will come near to breaking their hearts and may break their morale. They have been led to believe that the German armies were driving on to victory everywhere. When they learn that they are being driven out of Russia and Africa with casualties running into the hundreds of thousands, they will probably have something to say.

WASHINGTON PARADE

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

DELIBERATE LIE WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—Addressing the German people on the tenth anniversary of Hitler's rise to power, Reichsmarschal Hermann Goering said the other day that history would record June 22, 1941, as the date of the "most daring and most admirable decision ever made by one strong soul."

He was referring, of course, to Hitler's invasion of Russia. The decision was made, Goering said, in the face of the fact that the Fuehrer knew "Russia had five times as many tanks and ten times as many planes as the Germans."

"It was a glorious decision," the Reichsmarschal went on, "to stand up against this wave of blood which would have destroyed not only Germany but the entire west."

No more deliberate lie was ever uttered. Hitler did not order the invasion with any such knowledge of Russian strength.

As a matter of fact, the very contrary was true. Not only German intelligence, but that of the Allied nations as well, was grossly misinformed on the extent of Russian defensive power.

Hitler's military leaders had calculated far him that it would require no more than six weeks to destroy the Red army as an integrated fighting force. Some of our own highest military authorities, no less than the British, made the same mistake.

From the evidence then at hand, all competent authorities agreed at the beginning of the invasion that Russian ground and air equipment was so inferior that the Germans would have little difficulty in running roughshod over the Red army. The Russians had willed it this way.

LINDBERGH FOOLED It is now well known, for example, how Moscow pulled the wool over the eyes of our noted air expert, Colonel Charles Lindbergh. He came away from Russia with the expressed conviction that the Soviet air force was a third-rate organization, lacking both in good pilots and modern planes.

Not until Ambassador Litvinov came to Washington did we learn how Lindbergh was taken for such a ride. "We don't show him all our weapons," the ambassador admitted devilishly in his thick accent.

Neither were the Germans shown. When Hitler moved into Russia on that fateful day a year and a half ago, he did so with complete confidence in the superiority of his arms. In only one respect, he felt, were the Russians his equal: man power.

WHAT HE THOUGHT The Nazis fully expected to run through the Russians with the same ease as they had the Poles, the French and the Greeks. Had Hitler had a faintest suspicion of the vastness of the Russian military machine which the Soviets have since been revealed to possess, he never would have violated the ten-year nonaggression pact which he cast aside in marching into the country.

Goering is now falsifying the factual background of the Russian invasion in seeking to glorify Hitler for his greatest blunder. That he should feel compelled to do so says much for his intelligence.

It indicates a growing distrust on the part of the Germans of Hitler's leadership. The people have not forgotten his boastful announcement of a year ago that the Red army had been destroyed. Nor are their memories so short as to forget his solemn assurance of a few months ago that the occupation of Stalingrad would be made final and complete.

In an effort to save the Fuehrer the ignominy of his false promises, his monumental miscalculations, Goering now tells the people that the Nazis knew from the start the momentous decision involved in the assault on Russia. It was done, he said, to save Europe from Bolshevism.

He did not say what the earlier Polish invasion was supposed to save Europe from.

CONTRADICTION But it was characteristic of the duplicity in Nazi propaganda methods that Goering should belie himself in the same speech. After saying that the Germans knew of the superiority in Russian planes and tanks, he made this contradictory statement:

"It required all the hardships of last winter to realize that Russia was against Finland (1939-1940) was perhaps the cleverest, greatest camouflage in world history."

"We have seen a small but gallant nation (Finland) fight heroically for many months against this vast empire (Russia) and we thought, 'What danger can possibly come from that empire in the east?'"

Here Herr Goering was admitting that the Germans thought they had a push-over in Russia. If the little Finnish nation could hold up the Red army, what might be expected of Hitler's panzer divisions?

And yet, in the same breath, he had the affrontery to tax human intelligence with this additional statement: "The strength of the Russians was known, but the Fuehrer's intuition warned him we must attack all the same."

BEWILDERED Goering's speech was the mutterings of a confused and bewildered man who obviously was losing confidence by the German people. These people must be fed-up by now on Hitler's misadventured intuitions.

The fact that the speech was punctuated and held up for an hour by British bombs is a symbol of things to come.

Signs of

Nation at War

When the family drove into Canada in the summer of 1941, on vacation, perhaps the most noticeable evidence of the war was the fact that we had entered a country which was at war with Germany.

And yet, in the same breath, he had the affrontery to tax human intelligence with this additional statement: "The strength of the Russians was known, but the Fuehrer's intuition warned him we must attack all the same."

And yet, in the same breath, he had the affrontery to tax human intelligence with this additional statement: "The strength of the Russians was known, but the Fuehrer's intuition warned him we must attack all the same."

There are the women in uniform, the WAVES, the WAACs, the Army nurses, the Red Cross women, the auxiliary corps members, etc.

There are the restaurant regulations limiting you to one cup of coffee at a meal, to one small container of sugar. There is a change in the menus, with the non-scarce meat items such as fish, chicken, etc., seen more frequently.

There is the roar of planes overhead, which can be heard at almost any time of the day or night.

And in some buildings and some places you see the signs directing to places of shelter in case of air raid alarm.

Fewer Automobiles

There are fewer automobiles on the streets and, consequently, more street cars and buses and more people riding them.

There are the motion pictures, with a high proportion dealing with the war phase or other in their plots.

There is the constant undercurrent of war you hear in the conversation of those around you. There are the placard exhortations not to talk where strangers may overhear. The commands to "Bulldoze Your Lip," and to forth which, judging by the innocuous nature of nearly all the talk I hear, have been effective.

There are the ration books and the complicated routines to be followed if you need—and deserve—more than the rations for the old.

There are the long trains you occasionally see, of flatcars loaded with military equipment, uniformed men on guard. There are the trains, too, of tank cars trying to take the place of the tankers which carry the oil.

There are the people walking for amusement, instead of riding. There is the comparative scarcity of new cars on the streets.

Truly, the war is with us, here in Atlanta, all over the nation, all over the world, in everything we see, everything we hear, the things we taste and touch and smell. It

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Wallace WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—It appears from some of the utterances of Vice President Wallace and Joseph E. Davies, who served a spell as our ambassador to Soviet Russia, that these men take a not unpleasant and trustful view of Russian Communism and would like to sell the American people a bill of goods.

What they are up to I cannot guess, for Mr. Wallace is said to be a deeply religious man and Mr. Davies is a major league capitalist both in his own right and by marriage. For conflicting opinions take you to the files.

When Adolf Hitler broke his treaty with Joseph Stalin and attacked Russia on June 21, 1941, Winston Churchill took to the air at once with a promise of material, financial and military aid to the Soviet government because an enemy of Hitler was a friend of Britain's.

Nevertheless, as one who has often written vigorous opinions of Communism in the past, he was compelled to say also:

"The Nazi regime is indistinguishable from the worst features of Communism. It is devoid of all theme and principle except racial domination."

No one has been a more consistent opponent of Communism than I have for the last 25 years. I will unsay no words that I have spoken against it."

On December 1, 1939, President Roosevelt denounced Russia as an aggressor against Finland and denounced also Russia's policy of force in disregard of law. The next day he declared a moral embargo against Soviet Russia and asked American firms to shut off sales of war equipment to an aggressor who had bombed and machinegunned civilians from the air.

On June 1, 1941, 10 days before the invasion of Russia, when the President found it necessary to use troops of the regular Army to disperse rioters who were blocking the gates of the North American Aviation plant outside Los Angeles, Robert Jackson, then attorney general and now a justice of the supreme court, a Roosevelt appointee, said:

"The situation more nearly resembles insurrection than a labor strike. The distinction between loyal labor leaders and those following the Communist party line is easy to observe. Loyal labor leaders fight for a settlement of grievances. Disloyal men who have won their way into the labor movement don't want settlements. They want strikes. That is the Communist party line."

Change Of View Within a month of that date, American Communists, who had cheered the strike, were howling for more weapons and tools for Russia, and a few months ago, Charlie Chaplin, the distinguished, unnaturalized alien, pro-Communist paying guest of the United States, was demanding that American men be sent against the Nazi guns on a second front to relieve the pressure on Russia. Chaplin, who was not planning to go with them, remarked that in his time he had paid 10 million dollars in taxes as a paying guest, but neglected to add that of that amount more than one million was taken from him by force of law by the internal revenue department.

Chaplin's board bill in Uncle Sam's hotel at the sign of the free and easy.

One of the leaders of the California insurrection fomented by the disloyal men of the Communist party line was Wyndham Mortimer, a veteran disturber. For his part in this insurrection, Richard Frankenstein, national director of the aviation division of the United Auto Workers Union, of the CIO, found it necessary to fire him. However, not long afterward, the Cleveland Communists took Mortimer on as an organizer of the aluminum workers on the ground that in consideration of his past performance as a leader of insurrection, he deserved a break.

Our government's view of Communism was about the same as Churchill's at the time of Hitler's invasion. For Sumner Welles of the State Department said:

"This government has often stated and, in many of its public statements, President Roosevelt has declared that freedom to worship as their own conscience dictates is the great and fundamental right of all peoples. This right has been denied to their peoples by both the Nazi and Soviet governments. To the people of the United States, this and other doctrines of the Communist dictatorship are as intolerable and as alien to their own beliefs as are the principles and the Nazi dictatorship."

Last spring Francis Biddle, the present attorney general, upheld the finding that Harry Bridges was, by legal proof, a Communist and that he was therefore an enemy of this government. A few months later Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt recognized that the Communists of the United States were obedient to the rule of a foreign power.

Confusing Distinction Nevertheless, although any person who fraternized with or followed the "line" of the Nazis before Pearl Harbor is now suspect and in danger of indictment, many others, including Congressman Vito Marcantonio, who followed the Communist line, and some of the leaders of Mrs. Roosevelt's own union, the Newspaper Guild, who did likewise, are trusted as loyal Americans. And Earl Browder was released from prison for unity's sake.

The distinction is very confusing, reaches us through all our senses.

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today

From the news columns of Sunday, February 3, 1918:

"To take the place of the Georgia national guard, which has been mustered into the federal army, Governor Hugh M. Dorsey now has at his beck and call a 'Georgia militia,' consisting of eleven women—five officers and six privates."

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

FRIDAY, DEC. 20, 1940 It was but a few days before Christmas and Georgia's then efficient State Highway Patrol was noting the heavy travel of persons beginning their Christmas visits to relatives or to rejoin their families. Near Ringgold, Ga., a car with out-of-state license plates was stopped because of excessive speed.

It was a routine check. Patrolman Fred Black, aged 29, of Macon, Ga., went to the driver's side of the car, while his partner walked down the road back of the car to wave on the traffic. It was to be nothing but a pleasant warning.

Patrolman Black asked to see the driver's license. The driver snatched up a shotgun and fired it point-blank into Patrolman Black.

As Black fell dying to the road, the driver flung open the door of the car, the opposite side and fled into the woods, leaving his woman companion in the car.

That was five days before Christmas, 1940. The hunt was on.

It was the day after Christmas, 1940, that officers, following a trail of a stolen car and frightened farm people, saw a car's lights come over a hill and flash on the road block they had erected.

The car was immediately thrown into reverse and backed swiftly over the hill. It was found overturned. Blood hounds found a shivering, briar-torn, exposure-shocked fugitive lying in a clump of bushes.

His condition was not good. He was hungry and his feet were half frozen.

He was, nevertheless, in a snarling, fighting mood and said: "Let's go. They can't stretch my neck but six inches."

The usual maudlin sympathy followed. It was pointed out he was suffering from cold.

He was not as cold as Fred Black, who was cold in death following a ruthless and inexcusable murder.

No more cold-blooded murder has been known in the state.

THE RECORD It was revealed that Coates was an escaped convict wanted by state authorities in Missouri. His record was fairly brief:

1933—Sentenced to five years for armed holdup of drugstore. Escaped.

1934—Recaptured and resentenced. Other "jobs" done during the escape period. Again escaped and again recaptured.

1937—Paroled. Arrested for drugstore holdup. Jury disagreed on identity testimony.

1938—Running gun fight with officers following robbery of a general store. Captured. Escaped. Captured week later. Escaped again. Captured in Fort Worth, Texas. Escaped.

1939—Captured near Decatur, Tenn., following murder of Georgia highway patrol officer.

That, in brief, is the record of the man. On the record are other cases for which he has never been formally brought into court. The court at Ringgold tried the prisoner and sentenced him to death, there being no testimony to indicate anything other than complete guilt.

ON YESTERDAY Yesterday it was reported that Charles Coates, habitual criminal, confessed and convicted murderer, had again lost an appeal when the supreme court refused to review his case.

There is no good reason the public can see why it should have been reviewed. The whole case is just one other illustration of why people have grown cynical about courts and justice and government.

This delay is due in part to most unworthy politics and in part to the usual ironic fate of human nature, that the murdered man and his family are forgot.

CHARTING A COURSE Now, I am not attempting to discuss this from the angle of one demanding antielectrocution. Certainly more worthy cases have led their men to the chair in much less time. And certainly since we have such a law, Coates should have paid the penalty in some of the years that have passed since December, 1940. He committed a vicious, unprovoked murder.

The fact is, the Coates case has become an enemy of every man in prison.

Coates and his case have so aroused public opinion that public opinion is influenced against that worthy institution—the parole.

The recent Touhy gang case, in which one criminal had received 34 paroles, is another enemy of every man in prison.

Coates, and all others like him who are guilty by their own words and by all the evidence, argue against parole and against rehabilitation.

Coates, criminal and murderer that he may have had no chance in life. I don't know. His childhood may have been such, and his boyhood may have been such, that he was shoved into crime. I don't know. That, if true, is a reflection on us, but it is not the whole point.

His whole case is an example that some reform system, beginning before prison, through prison and into the parole plan, needs revision.

Coates will, I assume, now be electrocuted for a cold-blooded, unprovoked murder. He has been a long time since December, 1940. The evil he has done will live after him in more ways than one.

Claiming Superiority Invites Others to Disprove It With a Club

By ROBERT QUILLLEN.

A brief biography of "Assistant President" Byrnes, printed recently in a popular magazine, said he was born on the wrong side of the tracks. Another magazine story about the top aide of the Royal Air Force said he was born on the wrong side of the tracks in Canada.

I never see this phrase in print without resentment. It may be used innocently. It may be used only as evidence that superior ability can overcome the handicap of poverty and humble birth in a land of freedom. But it seems snobbish and unfair and cruel, like calling attention to a club foot.

My resentment is not personal. In the little Kansas town where I grew up, there was nothing on the other side of the tracks except stockyards and corn fields. There was no evidence of class division. A servant was a "hired girl"—some farmer's surplus daughter—and she ate with the family. I had to leave home and get outside the state to learn that some people are "better" than others.

Of course some people are superior to others in morals

Dudley Glass

There's an old saying that nobody loves a fat man—and it's without foundation.

They may not appeal to the fair young maidens but they have plenty of friends among the contemporaries. What a diddly Shakespearian about "the lean and hungry Cassius?" He liked men with meat on their ribs. He loved his own creation, the fat Falstaff.

What brought up this dissertation is Winston Churchill. Rather, his pictures in the papers, taken at Casablanca.

Whether Churchill is actually a fat man I can't say—but he looks plenty plump—and good natured. I like him. He looks like a good scout, with a sense of humor and an ability to see both sides of a question and to take a joke on himself. I'd say he'd be a swell chap on a party.

Calvin Coolidge was a lean and hungry-looking man and not many people liked him. They admired his ability but they didn't love him.

Taft was a huge man—not so fat as big. With the funniest little chuckle—coming from so big a chest. He was greatly loved. Herbert Hoover was—and is—somewhat of a fat man. But he always seemed to me to be mostly fat in the head. I'll admit his work in France proved he wasn't, but he never stacked up with me as a world power. Which remark will hurt his feelings tremendously if he reads this column, I'm sure.

But Churchill is my man. His pictures show him as sloppily dressed, pants unpressed, hat all slouchy—an old-fashioned David Harum kind of a fellow.

But nobody can doubt his supply of brains and ability to use them. You can't tell how far a frog can jump by his looks.

Good Sign

One of the most gratifying news items I've seen in the paper is that the Central of Georgia Railway is preparing to spend 15 million dollars in improving its system—and apparently knows where to get the money.

That's a definite sign that the United States, industrially, is getting back on its feet.

The Central of Georgia, its main line running from Savannah to Atlanta, has been in receivership for 20 years. That means it was busted. It was by no means the only railroad on the rocks. Much more important systems were busted, too, and living on borrowed money.

When a small shoe dealer goes busted and into bankruptcy he shuts up shop—and hunts a job. But a railroad can't do that. It has too big an investment. It is too much tied up with the affairs of its region. Its trains must be kept running, with or without passengers or freight.

Plump Mr. Churchill; Don't You Love Him? I Do—a Whole Lot

Well, the railroads are getting their passengers and freight these days—more than they can handle satisfactorily. They must be earning a lot of cash money. I think we're all glad of that.

So the Central of Georgia plans to put fifteen million dollars into new rails, improved track, better equipment. All of which means better service to the public.

It is to be expected that other railroads will be doing the same thing—many of them already have announced such programs.

Not many of us have cared as to whether the railroads suffered or prospered. Back in the old days their officials, from president to ticket agent, were arrogant czars who didn't care whether you bought a ticket or didn't.

If you didn't like the service or the price you could walk.

It's been different for a long time. Since the paved highways, the private automobiles, the buses and the trucks.

Nobody can argue in favor of war—but it's certainly done a lot for many industrial enterprises.

Just Bus Talk

Couple of days ago on the Buckhead bus I overheard a conversation between two Negro women. Who could help hearing it? When they got to talking and laughing, even the motorman up front can't keep his mind on his job.

"This here new time got me all balled up," said one. "I don't know whether I'm coming or going."

"Hit don't bother me none," said the other. "My white lady, she say, come to work when you feel like it and get the washin' done and when you git through go home. So clocks don't bother me none."

"But supposin' you got to catch a train," said the first. "Supposin' your sister dies down at Manchester and you got to 'tend her funeral. How you goin' to know when to catch a train? Or a bus?"

"I ain't got no sister down at Manchester," was the reply. "I got a half-sister in Chicago—least she was there five years ago—and if she dies I just won't go to her funeral. She got a husband—"

"—did have."

"That's all there is to that. I got off at the next corner."

Editor Ham, of the Calhoun County Courier, tells of a couple who defied the Sunday pleasure-riding rule.

"My boy friend came to see me and we went to ride," said the sweet young girl.

"What about gasoline?" inquired Editor Ham.

"We rid a mule," she explained.

8 New Local Bills Added to Assembly List

Measures Affecting Only Single Localities Go to Committee.

Eight additional local bills were added to Georgia senate and house hoppers as delegations sought changes in local operations of cities and counties.

Offered in the house and sent to committee were:

A bill to repeal application of an old act regarding the election of the Dawson county commission and making the new law applicable only after ratification by voters in a special referendum.

A measure to liberalize designation of a commission for management of the sinking fund to retire the bonded indebtedness of Athens, Clarke county, forcing the mayor and council to fill vacancies from nominees made by other members of the bond commission. Members would serve two years in the future.

A proposal to allow the board of water commissioners of Macon, Bibb county, to retire employees on pension for disability or age.

To authorize the mayor and council of Forsyth, Monroe county, to close up and abolish streets, roads and alleys.

Providing for election of a commissioner of Catawba county to take office December 31, 1944, for a four-year term with the salary ranging up to $3,600 a year.

Authorizing the pension of employees of Albany, Dougherty county, and permitting a tax up to five per cent to pay pension costs.

Empowering Decatur county to establish "air space" adjacent to airports to prevent airplane accidents. The bill would enable the county to control height and types of buildings to be built within 1,500 feet of airports in order that the skies will be unobstructed for the landing of planes.

The senate was asked to authorize the mayor and council of Carrollton, Carroll county, to issue fi for collection of business license fees, paving assessments and other indebtedness and to enforce collection.

Lorient U-Boat Base Wrecked by Air Attack

LONDON, Feb. 2.—(P)—Aerial reconnaissance reveals that terrific damage has been done to the German U-boat base at Lorient in France by American and British bombing attacks, the Air Ministry News Service announced today.

Ten acres in the naval arsenal have been devastated by high-explosive and fire bombs, the report declared, while 75 per cent of the German headquarters building appears to have been wrecked.

Since pictures were taken revealing this extensive damage, the news service pointed out, two additional night raids have been made by heavy British bombers on the submarine nest.

Survives After 76 Days At Sea in Open Lifeboat

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad, Feb. 2.—(P)—William C. Colborn, an American seaman, brought here today after his ship had been torpedoed off the West African coast, said that he had survived 76 days in an open lifeboat.

Colborn, who was too weak to give a coherent account of his experience, said that 20 men originally were in the life boat. Fifteen of them died before they were picked up by a ship, he said, and four others died aboard ship.

LEGATION IN CHILE RAISED.

CARACAS, Venezuela, Feb. 2.—(P)—The foreign ministry announced today that the Venezuelan legation in Chile had been raised to the rank of an embassy, with a corresponding change made for the Chilean legation here.

Mayor Warns Racketeers To Stay Out

Also Instructs Police To Check New Businesses.

Mayor Hartsfield yesterday warned Atlantans that the rationing of gasoline and tires will bring an influx of racketeers and other undesirable into the city.

He addressed a communication to police investigators pointing out that they may seek to open legitimate businesses as a blind.

In a formal statement he said: "Due to gas and tire restrictions, I am informed that there will be an influx of racketeers who have formerly operated gambling clubs, and disreputable joints on the roads, into the city."

"I am warning the investigators of the police department to be on the lookout for these people who will attempt to set themselves up in business in the city. Also, this is a warning both to this type of applicant and to our landlords not to commit themselves in advance to any leases or expenditures for furniture until their applications have been approved by the police department and general council."

"For many years these racketeers have been moving out on highways and now they are trying to get back into the cities. As far as possible we are determined to prevent it, and I call upon all of the good citizens of Atlanta to help us keep them out of our limits."

Good Morning

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

INTERESTING.

Dr. William V. Gardner, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Atlanta, began a most interesting evening by reading the following clipping:

"It is evident that the government now stands before the bar of public opinion as never before. Never before in our national experience have such enormous trusts been committed to an administration."

"It was supposed that the government would be in advance of the people, and that a stubborn individualism . . . and a democratic self-conceit would tempt us to carp at every public measure that demanded the least obedience to public sacrifice."

"Quite the contrary. The people have been in advance of the government, and have shown their loyalty not only in providing the most ample means, but by patience under reverses. Instead of making the worst, we have made the best of the sad blunders of leaders, and we have reason to marvel at our own good nature."

"We are asking not to beajoled, petted, indulged by our rulers, but to have the truth plainly spoken and the issue distinctly put. The government has not begun to appreciate the earnestness and honesty of the people, and seems to resort to concealment and artifice when openness and confidence would be far more politic as well as conciliating . . . "We are sometimes pained that this feeling is not always appreciated at the seat of government, and that generally Washington is the last place for a patriot to deepen his convictions or confirm his enthusiasm . . . "

"It is refreshing to turn to the great heart of the people, and to find it so true, so loyal, so strong, so self-sacrificing. . . . "

After waiting a moment for the group to settle back in their chairs, Dr. Gardner continued: "From the editor's table in Harper's magazine, November, 1862, exactly 80 years ago."

The magazine from which Dr. Gardner had read the above clipping had used this title, "The Deadly Parallel."

I wouldn't put it that strongly, but it does occur to me that the statement of 1862 by one of the greatest editors of that generation is, to say the least, quite interesting as a commentary upon present day Washington."

One can easily realize how difficult it is for the bureaucracy of Washington to know what the people are doing and how the people feel, but one does grow weary with the all-too-frequent assumptions on the part of some of the bureaucrats that the people have no interest in winning the war and preserving the way of life for which our fathers before us sacrificed.

NAVY OFFICERS

You appreciate the finest quality in your clothing. You insist upon uniforms that can stand constant wearing. That's why the U. S. Navy went straight to America's best mills for fabrics and to America's finer clothing manufacturers for quality tailoring. Besides pushing quality up, the U. S. Navy, also pushed prices down. You'll thank the U. S. Navy for the money-saving, but you'll thank them a lot more for the distinguished quality that's evident in every line and stitch of these uniforms. Come in and see the results . . . in the Navy Officers' Uniforms at Muse's, the store that has been famous for its quality merchandise for more than 63 years.

Japanese Are Not Interested In U. S. Real Estate, Tojo Says

By The Associated Press.

Premier Tojo was quoted by the Tokyo radio today as declaring that "Japan will fight to the end to crush America so long as America persists in obstructing Japan's war aims," but that Japan "has absolutely no territorial ambitions toward the United States or South America."

The premier spoke in a meeting of the budget committee of the lower house of the diet, replying to a question by Yusuke Tsurumi, Japanese writer and lecturer widely known in the United States, according to the broadcast, recorded by the Associated Press.

Tojo asserted that because of her conquests in the southwest Pacific area, "Japan has now become a 'have' nation far richer than Britain or the United States."

one advantage if they were willing to take the risks of loss involved in using it. They are believed to possess two or three large aircraft carriers, the Japanese Navy's three. The Japs have been very chary in the past, however, about risking their carriers close to Guadalcanal's land-based planes.

The Pacific fleet lost four carriers in the first year of Pacific war. The Lexington, Yorktown, Wasp and Hornet. That left three: The Enterprise, Saratoga and Ranger.

These figures are based on the fleet's strength at the beginning of the war and do not take into account the fact that several carriers since have been launched and that one or more may have been placed in commission.

Both sides have numerous auxiliary carriers—craft of limited capacity and use which formerly were merchant vessels.

The American forces should have the edge in land-based war planes if the fighting occurred anywhere south of Guadalcanal as the Tokyo statement said.

U. S. Land Aircraft Bases. At that point, not only aircraft from Guadalcanal but also from General Douglas MacArthur's command in Australia could be brought into full use. The closest Jap air base in the Solomons, on the other hand, is at Munda in the central Solomons about 190 miles northwest of Guadalcanal.

The enemy is trying to retake Guadalcanal immediately after the American invasion started on August 7, when Marine amphibious troops moved in under support of naval guns and planes.

On August 8 a fast Jap striking force surprised the American naval screening landing operation and sank four Allied destroyers—three American and one Australian—in an action that has come to be known as the Battle of Savo Island. The loss of these vessels undoubtedly hampered our early efforts to strengthen and expand American positions in the islands.

The next big push, nipped in the bud while still hundreds of miles east of the Solomons, was made in August and resulted in the Battle of the Eastern Solomons, August 23-25.

The Japs lost heavily in battleships and carriers damaged in that engagement.

Other Battles Won. The decisive Battle of Cape Esperance, October 11-12, the Battle of Santa Cruz islands, October 26; the sea battle off Guadalcanal, November 13-15 and a night action in the waters north of Guadalcanal which was fought November 30-December 1.

There is a "sporadic" raid in the Solomons campaign have cost the enemy 57 ships of all types sunk; seven probably sunk; and 101 damaged. At least 792 Japanese planes have been shot down in combat, while American plane losses have been only a fourth of that many. American forces have lost 28 ships in the campaign.

By far the greatest of the engagements was the three-day battle in mid-November. At that time the Japs threw in a whole fleet of warships and a dozen transports and cargo ships. They lost 38 ships sunk or damaged, including 16 warships sunk.

A Japanese cargo ship was damaged severely and five American planes apparently were lost, the Navy announced today, as enemy bases in the Solomons islands were held under the aerial attack Saturday and Monday.

In the north Pacific, meanwhile, light Japanese air forces bombed American bases in the western Aleutian islands for the first time since last June, but in two attacks, the first Sunday and another Monday, they failed to inflict any damage.

The Aleutian positions were not identified but probably were in the Andreanof group of islands which the Army Air Forces occupied last fall to get within easy bombing range of the Japanese base at Kiska. The first air attack on the Aleutians was made last June at Dutch Harbor and was followed by the Japanese seizure of the tip of the archipelago.

Air fighting in the south Pacific, as reported today, included an attack last Tuesday on the most distant enemy target so far known to have been raided in that area. Army planes, presumably either Flying Fortresses or Liberators, bombed and scored near hits on

On Guadalcanal, the Navy said, American ground forces, now all most entirely Army troops, continued to press forward slowly their campaign to exterminate or organize enemy resistance on the island. An American destroyer aided ground operations by shelling a number of barges off enemy-held Cape Esperance, the northwestern tip of the island.

Navy spokesmen doubted that the enemy reinforcements for the rapidly dwindling enemy forces, although they said they could not be certain on the basis of available information. It was suggested the barges might have been used in ferrying supplies from coastal regions to the path of the American advance.

Shipbuilding
South's Major
War IndustryNumber of Workers
Jumps to 150,000,
Bank Reports.

Within the last two years the number of people employed in shipyards in the southeast has grown from 74,811 to "somewhere between 125,000 and 150,000"—workers in "the major wartime industry" of the six southeastern states, the Atlanta Federal Reserve Bank disclosed yesterday in a business survey.

Fifty-six per cent of the supply contracts—amounting to more than a billion dollars—were in ship contracts, the report pointed out. One of the principal shipbuilding activities of the district is the construction of cargo vessels, mostly of the Liberty type.

The rapid growth of the industry has brought "serious repercussions" upon the civilian populations of such cities as Tampa, Jacksonville, Savannah, Panama City and Mobile where housing is a pressing problem, the report said. The place of new yards in the district in postwar construction may be determined by the challenge of the old, established yards for peacetime contracts.

Business Grows.
The Christmas shopping season was the largest in dollar volume in history, the report said, with department store sales in Atlanta going up 19 per cent. In Nashville sales in the second week of January were 38 per cent above the corresponding period of 1942. The largest percentage increase in department store sales in the district was recorded in Macon, "a city," the report pointed out, "that has been affected as much by wartime activity as any within the district."

In the textile industry, the report declared "there is every indication that capacity operation will continue in 1943. . . . Mills at present have orders booked from three to six months ahead. Greater orders would be possible if it were not the policy of many mills to restrict too distant commitments."

Favorable Factors.
"There are at least two favorable factors that will help in the conversion of the textile industry to a peacetime basis at the close of the war," the survey added. Since the present expansion has taken place without the creation of a large amount of new facilities, the problem of conversion to a production of peacetime products will not be too difficult. What facility expansion has taken place has been privately financed. "If the war is of long duration and the amount of civilian textiles available continues to decrease, there should be a considerable stored-up demand for the products of the cotton industry. There may also be a large demand immediately after the close of the war for textile products for export purposes."

Bond Quota for January Is Oversold in Cobb
Special to THE CONSTITUTION, MARIETTA, Ga., Feb. 2.—The January $61,400 war bond quota for Cobb county was reached January 15, H. O. Schilling, county chairman, announces. Schilling estimated that the total sales would probably reach $125,000 for the month.

New Secret British
Antiaircraft Gun
'Nightmare' to Nazis

By HOWARD BERRY.

LONDON, Feb. 2.—(INS)—Secret new antiaircraft guns of terrific hitting power and uncanny accuracy, the fruit of months of careful scientific tests, have made London probably the best defended city in the world, it was revealed tonight.

The new weapons were introduced into action by the scores on Sunday night, January 17, and threw up a "nightmare" barrage that completely befuddled the German air force when it renewed its raids on the British capital.

The ear-splitting noise of the barrage led many Londoners to believe that the German air attack that night was on a scale of the big so-called "blitz" raids of 1940-41. Only later did they learn that by far most of the din was caused by shells rather than bombs.

Fire To Kill.

Co-ordinated with the work of searchlight batteries and radio-locators, the great new antiaircraft guns no longer seek to saturate the skies with shells, but fire "to kill," aiming their salvos with the aid of rangefinders at the spot in the heavens where the enemy plane will be when the projectile gets there. Thus, Hitler's warbirds were routed from the London skies on the night of January 17.

New methods as well as new weapons, embodying some of the most closely guarded military secrets, made their debut that Sunday night and forced many of the raiders to turn away at the outskirts of the capital.

These great changes followed large-scale experiments. In recent months puzzled Londoners have watched searchlights chasing bombers, while the guns remained silent, and without knowing it, they were spectators to tests which yielded much valuable information to the British antiaircraft experts.

Gunnery Specialist.

General Sir Alan Brooke, chief of the British Imperial General Staff, who is a gunnery specialist, has taken a close personal interest in the new developments.

The new methods are still an official secret. But they are noisy secrets, and Londoners were quick to detect the sound of new guns above the general din.

There were spectacular happenings in the sky too. Shells burst in a close pattern around the diving planes, lighting the sky with a red glow.

Ack-ack fire was terrific, the raiders being enveloped in tremendous concentrations of exploding shells as soon as they were picked up by the searchlights.

Observers Astonished.

The strengthening of London's defenses had not been kept secret, but the extent to which the anti-aircraft batteries had been reinforced astonished many observers. As the result London today is one of the most strongly defended cities in the world—and improving all the time.

Home guards, who "stand by" at the battery one night in eight, now man almost all of the capital's new defenses.

An official of the antiaircraft command informed this writer that the home guard gunners did extremely well in their first real test.

"In two different parts of London, home guards who are in training to use these heavier guns were actually receiving instructions at their gun-sights when the raid began," the official told the writer.

Real Practice.

"They were so keen they they persuaded their instructors to let them have some real practice. Although they were not fully trained, they behaved like veterans."

Behind London's new barrage is a master mind.

He is a high-ranking army officer who, sitting on a raised platform in the gun-control room deep below ground in central London has control of the whole of the capital's guns, and he directs them as a conductor directs an orchestra.

On the desk in front of him stands a microphone, through which he gives orders which echo round the gun-sights from loud-speakers.

Radiolocation, which has made great strides since the last big raids on London has enabled A. T. S. girls to plot the course of aircraft in the gun-control room on a huge colored map, which tells the general officers commanding exactly what the guns have to do.

Each antiaircraft battery has its own radiolocation equipment and, within the general supervision of the general officer commanding, the battery commanders give the orders for the guns to be fired.

"Ack-ack gunners now shoot to kill," this writer was told. "Radiolocation has made prediction and range-finding so exact that the box barrage is a thing of the past."

"We now aim dead at the spot where our instruments say the plane will be when the shells get there."

Girl Gains Nothing by Wearing Her Heart on Her Sleeve

Dear Dixie:

For the past four years I've lived amid the romantic illusion that a certain man loved me. I loved him and wanted to marry him, and although he never mentioned marriage to me, I always had the feeling that some day he would. Not long ago, a girl whom I know visited in his home city and saw him. She returned raving about him to me and said they were "almost" engaged, and wasn't it thrilling? And didn't I think him wonderful? She has been married before and divorced her husband. What attitude should I take? BROKENHEARTED.

Since you had no strings on this man, there is no attitude you can take except that of indifference to the relationship between you and this man, and a casual interest in the affair. By refusing to talk about him and by not showing interest whatsoever in the girl who says, will show that you are hurt, brokenhearted and jealous. In other words, do not wear your heart on your sleeve. It never gets a girl anywhere or anything. Save your tears for your pillow, my dear. I think the widow is taking advantage of you, and is manufacturing a romance which never existed. If I were you I wouldn't take this man's attentions too seriously until he mentions marriage. Love him, yes; but don't bank too much on what you think may happen, because you have proof in this widow that things can change.

MAGNIFIES TRIFLES

Dear Dixie:

I am 27 years old and have been writing to Jimmie for two years. He has been back to see me twice for several weeks each time. You see, he lives out west and it is hard for him to come to see me. I am very much in love with him and he seems to be with me. We were nearly married when he was here a few months ago. Since he went back he has changed, and it seems he does not care whether he writes or not. Do you think he still cares for me, or is he getting tired and maybe cares for someone else? He has some people here, and it seems they do

Suit Your Exercises To Fit Your Job

By Ida Jean Kain.

What is your position on your job? Do you sit and bend forward? Or stand and bend forward? Do you have to lift and push? Or do you use one arm more than the other?

Whatever your working position, it makes certain muscles ache from tension at the end of a long hard day. To get the most out of exercise, do the kind that will give these groups a rest, work others strongly, and relieve the tension. Here is a set of tension-breakers to balance the work day.

For the girl who sits down on the job:

Position: Lying face downward on floor, legs straight down, arms straight and out on floor, shoulder-level.

Movement: Raise arms and upper backward and up off floor as high as possible. At the same time raise right leg off floor. Make the hip muscles work and keep the knee straight. Try to have the left leg perfectly relaxed as you do this and don't roll over on that side. Hold for a second, then flop down. Repeat with left leg raised.

Position: On back on floor, knees flexed.

Movement: Flex alternate knees to chest.

Movement: Flex alternate knees to chest.

When you have completed the exercise, flex both knees and hug them to your chest. Stay in that position for a couple of minutes. It's a rest for you.

For the girl who stands at her job:

Position: On back on floor with small towel folded under the round outward curve at the shoulders. Flex both knees and have feet on floor close to buttocks.

Movement: Bring alternate knee to chest.

Position: The same, but with one leg flexed and the other straight down on floor. Stretch arms up on floor overhead.

Movement: Push the left arm up on the floor and raising left leg slightly and pointing heel slightly, try to push leg downward so that it is an inch longer than the right. In doing the exercise, keep the small of the back on the floor.

For the girl who lifts and pushes:

Position: Lie on back on floor with feet elevated on low bench or chair, legs straight, and arms flexed with hands on shoulders, elbows out at sides shoulder-level.

Movement: Flex right leg to chest and, clenching fists, straighten arms upward on floor. Come back to position and repeat 10 times. Throughout, keep the small of the back pressed to floor. Perform with left leg.

For the one-arm worker who usually sits on her job, the exercises should be taken standing.

Also, she should make a habit of carrying everything, even her pocketbook, with the other arm.

Here is an exercise:

Position: Stand in good posture, arms stretched high overhead.

Movement: Shake both arms loosely but vigorously. Then go time—drop toward the floor. Finish by standing with one hand on chairback for support and shaking other leg from hip. Do the same with the other leg.

Regardless of your specific exercises should be taken standing, a good way to wind it up. It helps to rid all the muscles of tension that may have been worked up in the exercise.

Almost all of us need more stretching. Send large, stamped envelope for the leaflet "Stretching the Fat From Waistline, Ribs, Wishbone."

there is costiveness or constipation.

The dose of pre castor oil for an infant is from one to two teaspoonsful; for an older child a tablespoonful; for an adult two to three.

tablespoonful. In any case, the dose should be repeated in four or five hours if the first dose has not produced a thorough effect within that time.

In acute diarrhea or summer complaint, the day after such a dose of castor oil there is little or no residue left in the intestine and hence constipation may be normal for a day or two, and this should never lead to further use of physic.

Your Horoscope For Today

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS.

March 22-April 19 (ARIES)—The most promising vibrations of the day appear to operate between 4:48 p. m. and 10:14 p. m. making this time favorable for trips, unique ideas and the remainder of those who have been quiet and for matters of a religious nature.

April 20-May 20 (TAURUS)—Before 10:32 a. m. favors affairs that require cordial relations and happy contacts. After 10:32 a. m. favors the remainder of the day and evening your mind will be keen and you will be able to think quickly, but should avoid a tendency toward quarrels and squabbles of all kinds.

May 21-June 20 (GEMINI)—The entire day and evening favors receiving the cooperation of those who have the best interests of others at heart for quietness and for matters of a religious nature.

June 21-July 20 (CANCER)—Harmonious vibrations prevail throughout the entire day and evening, and the period should be filled with greater harmony of feeling, so you will enjoy greater pleasure and religious and social life have a stronger appeal.

July 21-August 22 (LEO)—The morning hours and until 12:17 p. m. contains influences that make this time favorable for trips, unique ideas and the remainder of those who have been quiet and for matters of a religious nature.

August 23-September 22 (VIRGO)—The morning hours and until 1:14 p. m. are very favorable for inspirational ideas, religion, education. You are likely to find this morning that the mind is more inspired than the sermon to which you listen, and your thoughts will be of an altruistic nature.

September 23-October 22 (LIBRA)—Slight disagreements may take on large proportions previous to 11:33 a. m. Afterwards you should have a feeling of resourcefulness, which enables you to carry out your plans with greater satisfaction.

October 23-November 21 (SCORPIO)—Previous to 7:55 a. m. and after 9:29 p. m. may be considered the best portion of the day, when you will be able to profit or gain through contacts with friends or when friendly contacts are easily made. The period favors the usual day's activities. After 9:29 p. m. favors romantic interests.

November 22-December 21 (SAGITTARIUS)—Before 8:01 p. m. is filled with influences that will allow you to carry out your ideas with ease and force. The period favors spiritual, intellectual and literary interests. After 8:01 p. m. does not favor taking unusual risks and matters started now are susceptible to setback.

December 22-January 19 (CAPRICORN)—Today will likely be a day of unusual surprises. Things you thought were impossible are likely to materialize. Plans started today should develop into successful ones. Conferences and meetings should encounter splendid results. New ideas are likely to have the support of unusual people and unexpected avenues will open up for action.

January 20-February 18 (AQUARIUS)—The day will start with pleasant influences, when you are apt to radiate happiness and feel a contentment all around.

February 19-March 21 (PISCES)—Previous to 4:50 p. m. a favorable period for writing, studying and especially auspicious for attending religious education. After 4:50 p. m. and continuing throughout the remainder of the day and evening favors affairs that call for special prudence and thoughtfulness.

Movie Fans Express Confidence In Frances Farmer's Comeback

By Louella O. Parsons.

HOLLYWOOD.—(INS)—If Frances Farmer could look into my mail she would get well in a hurry. Not only have the motion picture folk, almost en masse, asked what they can do, but fans all over the country have written and spoken of her brilliant work as an actress and how much they hope she will take a rest and come back to us feeling well again. To print all the names would fill the column, but there are very few who haven't expressed their faith in Frances and their hope that she will soon recover.

Twelve years ago Paul Muni was playing in "Counselor at Law," and Jack Warner went into his dressing room and persuaded him to come to Hollywood for "I Am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang." You all know that this movie skyrocketed Muni to fame and was one of the most-talked-of pictures of the year.

Now history may repeat itself. Muni is doing a revival of "Counselor at Law" and Jack paid him a visit in New York and carried with him a script of "Mr. Skeffington."

I understand the Epstein boys (Jules and Philip) have written a honey of an adaptation. Muni was so impressed with the script that he has agreed to give Jack an answer this week. The story should go into production with Herman Shumlin directing.

Alexis Smith is having tests taken for the role of Mrs. Skeffington. In the movie version the story goes back to where Mrs. S. was a beauty and where stunning gowns and was really the belle of her generation.

Lana Turner is still in the hospital, and although she hasn't yet had visitors, I talked with her over the telephone. She is eager to return to the studio and start work on "Marriage Is a Private Affair," her next movie, but says she feels that it would be most unfair to the studio to start on an expensive production and not be well enough to finish it.

"Everyone out there, Mr. Mayer, Mr. Mannix and Mr. Thau, have been so kind I wouldn't want to be responsible for a financial loss," Lana said.

The studio apparently realized she is not well enough to make the picture, and it has been postponed until after the birth of the baby early in June.

With political conditions in North Africa what they are and the French having so many different leaders, "The Life of General De Gaulle," would be extremely hazardous to bring to the screen at this time. Warners, who paid $50,000 to the Fighting French movement fund for the privilege of making De Gaulle's story—and plenty of money to William Faulkner for the screen play—are postponing it until conditions in North Africa are more settled.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD COLLECTED AT RANDOM: Whipped here and there is the gossip that Jimmie Stack, brother of Bob, will wed Neil Hart, Bob Sterling's sister, when his divorce is final; Cesar Romero's new heart-beat is Fay Emerson, Warner movie actress; the friends of Jessie Matthews will be happy to hear she is completely recovered from dining at Victor's just as Hedy Lamarr and John Loder walked in; Jimmy Howe, the popular Chinese cameraman, has been recruited by the Chinese embassy to do some camera work abroad; Mary Pickford has asked permission to visit Frances Farmer; Scott Darling, well-known writer, has confirmed the report that he is secretly wed to Violet Cavette. That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

MY DAY: Homes for Wives Of Service Men

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, Monday.—I had a letter the other day inclosing some clippings from a paper in a city which has become tremendously overcrowded because of war activities. The clippings urged that women whose husbands are in training in that neighborhood should remain at home as a patriotic duty and not attempt to be with them while they are still in this country.

The letter accompanying these clippings stated that when a man was in training, the probability was that he would soon be ordered out of the country and that, if it was possible, it seemed only right that his wife and children, if he had any, should be near him. What did I think was the right procedure to follow? It is a difficult question, because I do know that in many places the Travelers' Aid Society and all the local groups are attempting to find places for strangers to live and to tide them over until they have found a place. Every such agency is overburdened.

When a city becomes overcrowded, it is not just the lack of housing which is felt by all the residents. It is harder to get laundry work done and to buy food, transportation facilities are overtaxed, schools are overcrowded, places of entertainment are constantly filled to the limit. For the people who regularly live in that city, it is a difficult and often a disagreeable situation.

This is enhanced if the relatives and friends of the men in training require much assistance and, in addition, complain of the hardships which they have to endure. Yet, when all is said and done, if the man is going to leave this country for foreign service, and if his wife and children are willing to try to be with him until the last minute, I think everything should be done to make it possible.

It will require self-restraint on the part of the visitors, but all of us are citizens of a great country which is at war and these hardships are part of the war. Therefore, I think we must try to approach the situation with good will on both sides.

Some of my saddest letters come from the young newly-marrieds, who have no children and who know when the man goes off, they must go back to a job so that they will not find the hours dragging. Every minute that they can have with the man of their choice is like the pearl of very great price hidden in the oyster, because it is surrounded by so much that is ugly and hard to face.

Atlantans Entrain for Week Of Skiing in New Hampshire

WHEN THE STREAMLINER pulled out for New York last evening, probably the most excited passengers aboard were Dorothy Giddings, Margaretta Black and Jean Creekmore, of Athens. It is doubtful if any one of the three caught as much as "forty winks," for they had an absorbing subject to provide endless conversation. Besides, excitement is conducive to anything save sleep.

According to the threesome, they all have slightly guilty consciences over taking a pleasure trip, even via train, since they could be giving the time to some phase of the war effort. But, as Dorothy says, when she returns she's going to be a Red Cross nurses aide, and this is her last opportunity for a "fling."

The trio will spend a week in the metropolis, where they hope to be joined by Anne Eagan, who expects to come over from Bryn Mawr, where she is a student. Somewhat indefinite are plans to visit friends in Connecticut, a definite decision to be made after they have been in New York a few days.

The most thrilling part of their trip, and the real reason for going, is the excursion they will make into New Hampshire for a week of skiing, ice skating and sledding. The picturesque New England inn, in North Conway, will be their headquarters. Incidentally, they have a number of friends staying in North Conway, several Atlantans being among the group.

The belles will spend most of their time skiing, a sport at which they excel. Both Dorothy and Margaretta mastered the art while students at northern colleges, and Jean learned to manipulate the runners on various visits to places where skiing is the favorite winter pastime.

• • • SUELEEN WALTON is the name of the infant born to Caroline and Lowry Hunt on January 30 at Emory hospital. The mother of the baby is the former Caroline Candler, who made her debut in Atlanta when she spent the winter here with her grandmother, Mrs. Peter Walton Godfrey, in 1939.

The baby is named for her grandmother, Mrs. P. W. Hunt, and her great-grandmother, Mrs. Ellen Lowry, who live in Cedartown, Ga. The name of Walton was given Sueleen as a complimentary gesture to her great-grandmother, Mrs. Peter Walton Godfrey, and her great-grandfather, the late Peter Walton Godfrey, of Madison.

• • • WHEN little Mary Tom Crabtree entertained her godparents at dinner last Saturday evening, each guest's place was marked with an "annual report," the clever idea being, of course, that in the role of godparents they were entitled to a report on the progress of their small charge.

The report was a small cream-colored folder, on the front of which was a smiling picture of one-year-old Mary Tom in sepia tones. Inside was the tabulation, made out just like a bona fide financial report, with the year 1942 contrasted with 1943 in such items as the baby's weight, height, teeth, and disposition. For instance, her weight is now 24 pounds in contrast to 12 pounds and 3 1/2 ounces in 1942; height, 31 inches in contrast to 24 1/2; and 10 teeth as contrasted to none in 1942. As to disposition, 1943's was described as "perfect" in contrast to 1942's as "good."

• • • WHEN Julia Anne Florence and Roy Emmet Jr. were married in Cedartown recently, 15 of Roy's friends from Emory and an equal number of Julia Anne's schoolmates from Agnes Scott went over for the wedding. And they really had a grand time, from all reports, for they arrived there on Friday, the wedding was on Saturday, and they stayed through Sunday.

When the time came for the bridal couple to leave the Florence home for their honeymoon after the wedding reception, the boys formed an aisle from the foot of the staircase to the front door so Roy could not possibly escape them. As Julia Anne came down the stairs to meet him, the boys caught and "belled" Roy, while Pearce Cleveland, president of the Emory Glee Club, rushed up the steps and handcuffed himself to her. You can imagine what a time Roy had in getting himself rid of all the cow bells, dinner bells and sleigh bells he was encumbered with, as well as getting his bride released from her handcuffs.

For the traditional "something old" in her wedding ensemble, Julia Anne wore an antique gold brooch set with pearls and diamonds, which belonged to Roy's grandmother, Mrs. V. H. Emmet, who wore it at her wedding. The brooch was also worn by his mother, Mrs. Roy Emmet Sr., for her marriage. For "something borrowed" the bride wore a handsome platinum and diamond pin belonging to her mother, Mrs. Mason Florence. Both pieces of jewelry were worn concealed, however, so as not to detract from the strand of pearls which was Roy's gift to his bride. The "something blue," which completed the traditional good-

Miss Emily Rich Marries Mr. Ducoffe at Home Rites

Witnessed only by members of the two families was the marriage of Miss Emily Michael Rich and Arnold Lionel Ducoffe, which was beautifully solemnized yesterday at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Percy A. Rich, on Seminole avenue. Rabbi David Marx officiated.

The vows were spoken before a background of palms and smilax centered with a double arch of gleaming tapers. At either side were arrangements of white gladioli and snapdragons.

Mr. Rich gave his beautiful young daughter in marriage, and J. A. Ducoffe, of Montreal, Quebec, Canada, acted as best man for his son.

The bride's brunette beauty was further enhanced by her exquisite gown of lustrous white satin, trimmed with pearls embroidered in a delicate design. Her veil was caught to a Dutch cap of white satin which also was embroidered in pearls and trimmed with orange blossoms which had adorned her mother's wedding veil. She carried a bouquet of white orchids encircled with swainsons.

Mrs. Rich was attired in a model of grey wool trimmed with cut steel, her black hat being adorned with coque feathers. Mrs. J. A. Ducoffe, of Montreal, Quebec, Canada, the groom's mother, wore a costume of bright blue wool with a black hat. Both wore shoulder sprays of orchids. The groom's sister, Miss Nan Ducoffe, also of Montreal, wore a model of wine wool and her flowers were deep pink camellias.

Miss Ducoffe assisted in serving at the breakfast for the bridal couple and immediate families, which followed the ceremony.

The bride's table was overlaid with a white satin cloth and centered with a three-tiered wedding cake embossed with yellow and white icing roses. Placed at either end were tall white tapers. Later the afternoon the bridal couple left for a wedding trip to Connecticut where they will reside. The bride traveled in a suit of moss green wool with brown accessories and a scarf of stone martin furs. A spray of white

State Garden Club Advocates Gardening as War Weapon

By BESSIE F. KIRVEN, Chairman Publicity, Garden Club of Georgia.

"Garden for Victory and Food as a Weapon of War" was the accepted theme of the executive board of the Garden Club of Georgia when it met in Atlanta last week.

Mrs. Thomas Brumby, president, and Atlanta members of the board entertained at the meeting at the Capital City Club, which was followed by a luncheon. Twenty members attended from Atlanta, Columbus, Macon, Rome, Athens, Madison, Forsyth, Griffin and Marietta.

Reports of officers and committee chairmen convincingly revealed that the organization has taken its place in the front line of home defense in a country at war and is functioning as garden clubs should by the growing of flowers and vegetables.

The Garden Club of Georgia voted to sponsor a Victory garden campaign, not only as a patriotic obligation, but to meet the emergency of food production which is at hand. Plans will be made to divide the state into districts and garden clubs will promote the development of gardens in these areas, give cultural advice, and get the idea over to communities and individuals that food has a military significance now and after the war.

Miss Lurine Collier, chairman of Victory gardens for the Garden Club of Georgia, outlined plans for Victory gardens to fit into the local needs of communities. She stated 1942 Victory gardens were an outstanding success and those of 1943 would be greater as the subject is nation-wide and the needs so acute.

Plans were made for the garden school, which is staged by the University of Georgia in co-operation with the Garden Club of Georgia. It was presented by Roy Bowden, and, in view of transportation problems and necessary activities at the university, it was decided "to take" the school to garden club members over the state instead of their "going to" Athens for a short course in gardening. Tentative plans call for schools to be held at designated places over the state where those who wish to attend, can commute by bus. The instructors will be under the direction of the University of Georgia and the program will fit into the war activities for better gardening, food production and its preservation.

Mrs. Rembert Marshall read the roadside development and billboard bill which will be presented to the legislature this session.

Mrs. Brumby reported on the Red Cross ambulance fund for insular possessions. Two hundred clubs responded and $2,215 was sent to the Red Cross as a Christmas gift. She also requested that the amount, set aside for her expenses as president, be used for the purchase of defense bonds. The board abided by her request.

P.-T. A. Meetings of Interest

Decatur Boys' High.

Decatur Boys' High P.-T. A. meets on Thursday at 8 p. m. in the school auditorium, with the president, Mrs. W. C. Thomas, presiding. E. P. McGee, county agent, will speak on "The Making of Your Backyard into a Garden for Victory." Community singing will be enjoyed. The executive committee will meet at 7:30 p. m.

O'Keefe P.-T. A.

Executive board of O'Keefe Junior High school meets today at 10:30 a. m. at the school.

The war emergency committee announces that today is the tin can collection date, and asks everyone to send or bring their cans to the school. It also is announced that Miss Almada McFaden, of the faculty, is leaving, having joined the WAVES. Miss Betty Shaw, a new member of the faculty, was introduced at the last meeting.

Hapeville North Avenue.

Hapeville North Avenue P.-T. A. has entered the stamp and bond drive for the new cruiser Atlanta. The organization is buying two $50 bonds. The children are sponsoring another scrap drive and paper sale, the proceeds to be used to buy additional cruiser bonds.

The organization is working on a project for all the school children to have their blood typed. Parents are requested to co-operate, as this is very important. A group of blood donors has been formed. Others are needed. Donors are asked to contact Mrs. W. C. Pattillo. The children are lending their efforts to the polo fund drive. Twenty-five dollars has been contributed by the P.-T. A. for this work.

Glennwood P.-T. A.

Mrs. J. B. Riddle Jr. has called an executive board meeting of the Glennwood (Decatur) P.-T. A. for today at 9:45 a. m. Following the board meeting there will be a meeting of the study group at 10:30 a. m. Mrs. Charles Derry, wife of the American con-

Mr. and Mrs. Hill Mark Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Bell celebrated their golden wedding anniversary last Friday at a buffet luncheon at their home near Forest Park, given by members of Colonial Hills P.-T. A. Club, of which the celebrants are members. Mrs. Bell, the former Nora Smith, is the daughter of the late W. J. and Delilah Bankston Smith, of Jenkinsburg, Ga. She received her education at Jenkinsburg Academy.

Mr. Bell is the youngest son of the late Elijah Hamilton and Martha Elizabeth Miles Bell, of Hagan, Columbia county. He received his education in Armstead public schools in Mississippi. Mr. Bell entered the services of the Central of Georgia Railroad July 19, 1889 and retired July 30, 1931.

After the luncheon, which was prepared by Mrs. Bell, who is 70 years old, a marriage ceremony was performed before a bank of gladioli by Rev. E. E. Keene. Austin Abbott, nephew of Mrs. Bell, was best man and Mrs. Bessie O'Quinn, niece of Mr. Bell, was bridesmaid.

Mrs. Bell was gowned in black alpaca with white accessories, and wore orchids on her shoulder. Mrs. O'Quinn wore an ensemble of black with sweetheart rosebuds. Little Juanita McKown was ring bearer. Mrs. Bell was given in marriage by her youngest brother, John Low Smith. Mrs. J. C. Hulan arranged the music. Mrs. Robert Earnest acted as hostess, assisted by Mrs. Claude Brock. Mrs. Edwin McKown presided at the bride's table, which was overlaid with a hand-made tablecloth. The centerpiece was a three-tiered wedding cake embossed with a golden wedding bell and yellow roses.

The beloved couple number their friends by the thousands, which was attested by the presents, telegrams, flowers and greetings sent them on this happy occasion. Although they have no children, they have helped many worthy girls and boys to a finer and higher plane of right living by their understanding sympathy and encouragement. They are affectionately known as "Uncle Walter" and "Aunt Nora" to three generations.

Smith-Fore Rites Announced Today.

SCOTSDALE, Ga., Feb. 2.—Mr. and Mrs. Z. F. Smith announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Violet Christine Smith, to Wayne Howard Fore, of Brookhaven, Ga., and the former, Md., son of Mrs. J. H. Fore and the late Mr. Fore, of Brookhaven. The ceremony was solemnized on January 27 at the Avondale Methodist church, in Avondale Estates. Rev. W. E. Buice officiated at the double ring rites. Miss Winona Titshaw presented the music.

Miss Evelyn Frances Smith was her sister's maid of honor, and Claude Morris Jr. was best man. The bride wore a suit of powder blue with navy accessories. Her flowers were sweetheart roses and valley lilies.

Following the ceremony, a reception was given by the bride's parents and her sister, Mrs. J. R. West, at the parental home in Scottdale.

Mother, Mix Your Own Cough Syrup. It's Fine

Quick, Comforting Relief. Saves Money. Easily Mixed.

This well-known medicine, mixed in your own kitchen, costs little, but it gives delightful, swift-acting relief from coughs due to colds. It takes but a moment to prepare—it's so easy a child could do it. It saves real money. Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups granulated sugar and 1 cup of water a few moments until dissolved. No cooking is needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Then get 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex from any druggist. Pour this into a pint bottle, and add your syrup. Thus you make a full pint of really splendid cough medicine and you get about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, lasts a family a long time and children love its taste.

And for quick, blessed relief, you'll say it is truly wonderful. It has a remarkable action. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its prompt action in coughs and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

sul to Australia, will speak on "Australia." All P.-T. A. members, preschool mothers and the general public are invited.

Miss Trice, of Birmingham, Wed to Lupton Rainwater

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 2.—Of interest in the south is the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Trice, of this city, of the marriage of their daughter, Miss Betty Jane Trice, to Lupton Rainwater, of Pensacola, Fla., and Highlands, N. C., formerly of Atlanta.

The marriage took place last Saturday in Pensacola at the home of the groom's father, Veazey Rainwater.

After the ceremony, Mr. Rainwater and his bride left for a wedding trip to Houston, Texas.

Miss Kasover To Address Junior Hadassah Meetings

The Atlanta unit of Junior Hadassah has arranged a special program to honor Miss Geraldine Kasover, of Bayonne, N. J., a national vice president of Junior Hadassah, who will visit the unit on February 9-11.

Miss Kasover will address the city at an open meeting to be held February 11, at 8 p. m., at the Wincoff hotel. She is an excellent speaker, has wide organization experience and will bring a stimulating message to the public.

Tuesday evening, February 9, a dinner will be held at the Wincoff hotel from 6 to 8 p. m., at which time the general membership is invited to meet Miss Kasover. Reservations can be made with Miss Jennie Davidson, Vernon 3722. The first session of Junior Hadassah school to be conducted by Miss Kasover follows from 8 to 10 p. m. A board meeting will be held from 6 to 8 p. m., February 10, after which the second session of school takes place from 8 to 10 p. m. at the Wincoff.

Preceding the open meeting on Thursday, the final third session of school will be held from 6 to 8 p. m. for all junior members.

Miss Kasover is making a southeastern tour of 10 cities to address school audiences on the part which Palestine is taking in the war effort of the United Nations, and on the program of Junior Hadassah in aiding the young fighters and workers of Palestine, and in activities in American defense. She was a student at New York University where she majored in English.

The United Council Of Churchwomen

State President, Mrs. Audley Morton, Athens; State Publicity Chairman, Mrs. E. G. Mackay, Atlanta.

The midwinter meeting of the board of directors of the Georgia Council of Church Women was held recently in Atlanta and, though transportation and other difficulties kept several local councils from being represented, the reports given in person or by letter of co-operative Christian service in various Georgia communities was very encouraging. The stress of today is causing more and more Christian women to recognize the fact that local church and denominational loyalty is, or should be, only a means to an end, and that end is the larger and higher loyalty to Jesus Christ and His Church Universal. More tolerance for or even sympathetic sentiments toward those of other churches cannot adequately express this higher loyalty unless co-operative action be added.

The United Church of China has an excellent motto which do well to adopt. It is:

Agreed to differ;
Resolved to love;
United to serve.

Too many church members live by the first phrase; some rise to the second; but only a few Christians everywhere add to their love for God the attitude towards other Christians that is expressed by the entire motto, can the Christian church (which is far greater than any of its branches) be fully used to heal this broken world. This was but one of the many challenging thoughts included in the echoes of the great interdenominational gathering held in Cleveland last December, which were brought by Mrs. Audley Morton, Mrs. H. C. Dean and Mrs. J. W. McQueen.

The annual World Day of Prayer, observed across the nation and around the world, has been set for March 12 this year. Surely there has never been a year when such united prayer was more needed! It is, therefore, hoped that every town in Georgia and every section of Atlanta will hold on that date an interdenominational prayer-meeting. The use of the special program provided for that day, while, of course, not essential, will add much to the value of the observance by uniting thoughts and petitions with thousands of other Christians in every land. As heretofore, the program has been prepared by a special committee of outstanding Christian women, of various denominations, nationalities and races. Miss Margaret Applegate, of New York, is this year's chairman and Mrs. Benjamin E. Mays, of Atlanta, was a member of the committee.

Mrs. H. C. Dean, 1591 Elizer avenue, N. W., Atlanta, is promoting the observance of the World Day of Prayer throughout Georgia, and will be glad to be of service to any who may desire suggestions or help. If you believe in inter-church co-operation there could be no better way in which to begin it, and it is not too early to begin making plans.

Ralston-Chandler Betrothal Told

Announcement is made today by Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Ralston of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ruth Anne Ralston, to Technical Corporal Allen E. Chandler, United States Army. The wedding will be solemnized Saturday, February 6.

Miss Ralston is the only daughter of her parents, and was formerly a resident of Moultrie.

Mr. Chandler is the son of A. V. Chandler, of Donaldsonville, and is stationed at Fort McPherson.

Mr. Haskew To Speak
L. D. Haskew, president of the Georgia Education Association, will speak at the meeting of the Atlanta Council of Parent-Teacher Associations Thursday at 10:30 a. m. in Rich's tearoom. Mrs. W. C. Kendrick, president, will preside.

Nominating Group Elected At Junior League Meeting

Climaxing the program of the Junior League meeting yesterday was the election of three members to the nominating committee. Prior to the election, Mrs. Errol Hay Jr. announced the presidential appointment to this committee of Mrs. Colquitt Carter as chairman and Miss Jane MacMillan and Mrs. Hunter Bell, Mrs. A. C. Latimer and Mrs. Hugh Dorsey Jr. were elected by the membership to complete the committee personnel.

The meeting, which took place at the Piedmont Driving Club, was devoted almost entirely to various subjects relating to the war and the Junior League's full co-operation to the war effort.

Miss Ernestine McGill, of the Atlanta School of Social Work, was introduced by Mrs. H. W. Beers Jr., education chairman for the league. Miss McGill, who for the past two years has conducted the Junior League provisional course lecture on social welfare, drew a distinct picture of the sociological aspects of the war's effect on the home front, stressing the necessity of keeping a vigilant

Episcopalians Open Series Of Meetings

Dr. McGregor To Preside at Conference Continuing Through Monday.

Episcopalians from the 18 dioceses of nine southern states will gather at 10 a. m. today at All Saints Episcopal church for the second session of a conference for religious education. Dr. D. A. McGregor, executive secretary of the department of religious education of the Episcopal church, will preside. The conference will continue through next Monday.

The meeting opened last night with an address by Dr. McGregor on "The Dilemma of the Family Today."

Dr. McGregor, Dean Elwood Haines, of Louisville, Ky.; Miss Ellen Carroll, executive secretary of St. Mary's Cathedral, Memphis, Tenn.; Miss Florence Lerch, past provincial president of Young People's Service League and representative to the youth conference held in 1939 in Amsterdam, Holland, and the Rev. Van Garrett, of Greenville, Miss., will lead the discussions for the professional leaders in religious education. Bishop John Long Jackson, of Louisiana, chairman of the provincial department of religious education, will hold a meeting of his department Friday.

Bishop John Moore Walker, of Atlanta and other members of the local clergy will take part in the services Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The Rev. McGregor is widely known in mission fields both at home and abroad. Early in his career he spent several years in India teaching philosophy and the Bible at Allahabad Christian College. He saw service in World War I with the Red Cross. He now is a frequent lecturer at the College of Preachers, Washington, D. C., and is a regular lecturer at the General Theological Seminary, New York. He has served as rector of several of the larger parishes in the midwest.

Nomination of Minister To Australia Delayed

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—(P)—President Roosevelt told his press conference today he hoped to make a new appointment soon of a minister to Australia in place of the withdrawn nomination of Edward J. Flynn, former Democratic National Committee chairman.

Asked about reports that Joseph C. Grew, former ambassador to Japan, might be sent to Australia, the President said he had made no decision.

THE HUGE GORILLA SPOKE TO HIS FOLLOWERS: "MORE SHES! WE GET MORE SHES TONIGHT---THE DANCE OF THE DUM-DUM!"

Farms Now Planning '43 Crops To Meet U. S. Responsibilities

(In this war era of food rationing, a lot of people who perhaps never gave the subject much thought before are concerned over the farmers' problems. So Ovid A. Martin, Associated Press farm specialist, explains these problems in three daily articles, of which this is the first. Tomorrow: How Farm Prices Are Determined.)

By OVID A. MARTIN.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—(AP)—This is agriculture's "blueprint" period—the time of the year when six million farm operators make plans for the crop season ahead.

The sum and total of those plans will go a long way toward determining how well the United States meets its enormous wartime food responsibilities. Vast quantities of food—between a fourth and a third of the nation's output—will be needed for America's fighting forces and its Allies. These military needs come first. Civilians will get what is left.

So civilians have a two-fold interest in this year's farm production: First, food is needed as a weapon of war; second, the greater the production, the less will be the limitations on civilian consumption.

Wickard Assistance.
In making production plans, farmers have the assistance of Secretary Wickard and the Agriculture Department, with its organization extending right down to the farm.

Farmers, with the aid of local farm committees and department representatives, work from a master blueprint in arranging their individual plans.

That master blueprint is the national farm production program drawn up by Wickard and his aides. This program is made up of production goals for the various farm products. These goals are based on anticipated needs—military, lend-lease, emergency stockpiles and civilian.

Greatest Emphasis.
This national program places greatest emphasis now on livestock feeds; vegetable oil crops such as soybeans, peanuts and flax; canning crops, potatoes, dry beans and peas, and certain truck crops; and pork, beef, milk and poultry production. In the case of most of these products, the goals are larger than last year's.

In the case of a few products, the goals are either smaller or unchanged from 1942. Those products included wheat, short-staple cotton and tobacco. The department figured that existing supplies of these commodities were sufficient to restrict 1943 production of them. Land and labor which otherwise might be used in expanding production of these products now need to be available for crops now needed in larger quantities.

Production Goals.
Production goals are being worked out in the counties for each and every farmer. Those goals are designed to fit the productive facilities of the farm—that is, the amount of land, labor, machinery and other equipment available, and the climate, marketing and processing problems. Except in the case of wheat, short-staple cotton and tobacco, the goals are not limits on production. In fact, farmers will be asked to possibly can.

The Agriculture Department is offering other forms of assistance to farmers. They include credit, labor recruitment and transportation programs for supplies and guarantees, aid in the transportation and distribution of some scarce types of livestock feed, and financial aid in the form of benefit payments.

Criticism of Program.
The department's program has been criticized in several quarters during recent years. Some critics contend that the program is not designed to take full advantage of agriculture's productive ability, that the goals are not high enough. Some farm officials are concerned about the possibility of overproduction and depression of prices.

One of the points of debate is that the 1943 food program is being built on the foundation of crop adjustment laws enacted to deal with surpluses rather than shortages.

Topmost among those laws is the agricultural adjustment act with its provisions for acreage allotments, benefit payments, commodity loans, marketing quotas and penalty taxes.

Secretary Wickard says these laws are, for the most part, flexible and capable of being used for expanding production as well as curtailing it.

Crop Control Issue.
Some in agriculture believe that the government should suspend all crop control laws for the duration and leave farmers to produce as they see fit. Give farmers a market and a good price, they say, and a bountiful output would be the result.

Wickard argues that uncontrolled production would end up with too much of some things and not enough of others. He cites wheat, cotton and tobacco. Because the country has relatively large reserves of these products, the government has imposed certain restrictions on production of them. These restrictions have been coupled with inducements for production of crops needed in larger volume.

Others contend that the AAA system of acreage allotments for the major crops hinders development of a production-expansion program which would more precisely fit the potentialities of each region, area and farm. They point out, for example, that a farmer in an area good for little besides wheat must take the same percentage of reduction or expansion in acreage as a farmer in an area suited to production of other crops.

Benefit Payments.
Under the law AAA benefit payments must largely be limited to wheat, corn, cotton, tobacco, rice and peanuts. Some farm leaders declare this should be changed so that the money could be used as "incentive" payments to encourage greater production of the

Burglary, Larceny Bills Issued by Grand Jury

J. S. Amoson was indicted by the Fulton county grand jury yesterday on a charge of burglary. He was alleged to have stolen $800 in war bonds, $307.70 in cash and several cartons of cigarettes from the store of B. H. Rodgers at 810 Cascade avenue, S. W., on January 21.

Glenn Payne, 25, of 443 Windsor street, S. W., was indicted on a charge of larceny from the house. He was alleged to have stolen from the offices of the U. S. Army engineers, on January 11, a platinum ring valued at $200, the property of Mrs. J. P. Mathis.

Getting The Range at Fort Mac

Callie, the bachelor officers' mess cook at Fort McPherson, has worked out quite a system.

Callie is buying war bonds regularly out of her salary but she wasn't quite satisfied with her progress.

One day at lunch, the waiter appeared with a glass bell-bell in hand which he passed up and down each table. "For Callie's bond," he explained.

Now, instead of regular tips for the cook, the officers ring the bell with the spare change from time to time and Callie is completing a $25 bond which will go to the U. S. S. Atlanta fund.

P. S.: Callie is extremely careful to have her bank passed around only on the days when she serves soup, salad and dessert in addition to the regular meat and vegetable course!

A 75 per cent increase in church service attendance in the last six months was reported today by Colonel George J. Zentgraf, Catholic chaplain of the III Corps Headquarters.

A program to discover and correct all physical safety hazards at Fort McPherson is underway with Lieutenant Carroll E. Daniel named accident prevention officer and J. R. Harper, civilian employee, named accident prevention engineer. Working with a committee of civilian personnel, they will tour the post, inspecting all workshops and instituting a regular safety program.

In an effort to conserve both man power and equipment, an educational program to reduce accident resulting from negligence and disregard for safety rules has been started.

It's Major Myer C. Tackeff now... officer in charge of the Fourth Service Command Motor Pool, his promotion from captain to major was announced yesterday.

Lieutenant Dyer E. Butterfield, of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., formerly physical services officer at the Fort McPherson Reception Center, has been made adjutant of the Reception Center.

He came to Fort McPherson in November, 1940, and at one time served as induction officer. A graduate of Purdue University, Lieutenant Butterfield is married, and now lives with his wife on the post.

He succeeds Captain Rupert Ingram, field artillery officer, who went to another assignment.

Taking Lieutenant Butterfield's place as special services officer will be Lieutenant James R. Henderson, of 741 Piedmont avenue, formerly an area commander in the Reception Center.

Rev. Pittman, John Wade Dies; Rites Tomorrow

John J. Wade, 64, died at his home on Bankhead avenue yesterday afternoon.

He is survived by his wife; a daughter, Mrs. James F. Kent; his step-mother, Mrs. P. H. Wade, of Piedmont, S. C., and two brothers, L. S., of Greenville, S. C., and T. O. Wade, of Anderson, S. C.

Funeral services will be conducted at 3 p. m. tomorrow at the Oakwood Baptist church in Anderson, S. C.

Funeral Services Will Be Conducted at 10:30 A. M. Friday.

Rev. A. A. Pittman, 88, of 202 Flora avenue, N. E., a retired Baptist minister, died yesterday morning in a local hospital.

After receiving his early education at the Farmers' High school, in Heard county, Alabama, and in the Cave Spring High school, Cave Spring, Ga., he taught several years at the Hearn Academy in Cave Spring.

He then entered the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky., and was ordained in 1882. Rev. Pittman served several churches among which were the Bethany church, in Tallapoosa, Ga., the Pine Bower church, Polk county, Georgia, and the Beulah church, in Carroll county.

For the past 20 years, he had lived in Kirkwood, and was in charge of the grounds in the Besse Brannon Memorial park.

Funeral services will be held at 10:30 a. m. Friday, with Dr. K. O. White officiating. The body will lie in state from 9:30 to 10:30 a. m., and burial will be in the Line Branch cemetery, Cedartown, Ga.

Small shops, which have suffered heavily since the war started, are doing better in Scotland than in England.

Mortuary

Lieutenant M. C. (Jack) Williams, of 1311 Lee street, died at 10:30 a. m. today in Trinity Methodist church, where he was officiating. Burial will be in Hill Crest cemetery.

Funeral services for Mrs. D. C. Pruitt, who died Sunday night, will be conducted at 2 p. m. today in the Trinity Methodist church, with Rev. George M. Acree officiating. Burial will be in Hill Crest cemetery.
